100 TALMADGEITES LOSE JOBS AT CAPITOL AS JONES IS NAMED CARREKER SUCCESSOR

BYRD IS DEFEATED AS SENATE VOTES EXTENSION OF RFC

Glass Disagrees With Virginia Colleague and Pushes Plan; House Banking Committee Also Approves Proposal.

STANDBY AGENCY IS AIM OF JONES

Lending Powers of Commodity Credit Corporation Are Also Extended by Senate's Resolution.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP) Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, who has dedicated his life to lopping branches off the spreading tree of government, watched with vexation today while the senate gave a long lease of life to one of the largest boughs.

Vainly, Byrd struggled to change a resolution extending the lending powers of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation until June 30, 1939.

He argued for one-and-a-half-year extension, contending that if the RFC's life were prolonged further, 14 other lending bureaus would be treated likewise. This, he said, would mean a long delay for his cherished plan to abolish some agencies, merge others, and cut the cost.

But the senate passed the administration resolution, with only Byrd dissenting. Subsequently the house banking committee also approved it. Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, which has lent billions to tide business and financial institutions over the depression, told the committee:

Standby Agency.

"We propose to make the RFC a standby agency in case of need."

The senate fight produced a rare phenomenon of a disagreement between Byrd and his colleague from Virginia, Senator Glass. The latter, who also is an advocate of economy, denied the RFC extension would interfere with government reorganization plans or set "a precedent for the continuation of other agencies."

Glass piloted the measure as acting chairman of the banking and currency committee in the absence of Senator Wagner. When Byrd asked if it were not easier to discontinue an agency now than later, Glass said:

"If the senator wants my private opinion, it is going to be difficult to abolish any of these agencies."

Says Crisis Over.

Byrd said he did not believe the crisis which resulted in formation of the RFC would "continue to exist for the next two and one-half years."

"The only time to abolish a bureau or agency is on the date of its termination," he said. "If continued, such agencies will remain indefinitely among the functions of our government."

Lending powers of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Export-Import Bank, the RFC Mortgage Corporation and the Electric Home and Farm Authority, as well as of the RFC, are extended by the resolution.

The RFC chairman told the house committee the agency had made a profit of "considerably less than one-half of 1 per cent" on loans repaid. This, he said, was less than the profit of private lending agencies.

He said "we'll be lucky to get our money back" on loans made to farmers by the Commodity Credit Corporation, explaining that "loans unfortunately exceeded the market."

Barrymore's Fourth Marital Venture Fails

John Barrymore Sued for Divorce; Elaine Says 'Great Lover' Hit Her

Actor Accused of Calling Bride of Few Months "Vile and Obscene" Names, of Striking and Threatening to Kill Her at Night Spot in Bill Asking for Cash.

By THEON WRIGHT.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 15.—(UP) Ruby-lipped Elaine Barrie, who chased John Barrymore across the country a year ago and married him at Yuma, Ariz., tonight filed suit for divorce.

The dark-eyed New York schoolgirl, who fired the actor out of their home New Year's Eve—two months after she married him—said in her complaint the divorce action was "precipitated by their separation, January 1."

Elaine said John called her "vile names," and struck her in the presence of a crowd gathered in Torcadero cafe, film colony night spot, because he was "jealous of my acting talents."

The suit was prepared by Leo Schaumer, Hollywood lawyer, whom Miss Barrie engaged shortly after the bizarre rift in Barrymore's fourth marriage became public.

The complaint alleged, among other things, that the row at the Trocadero started when Miss Barrie told her husband she must begin rehearsals for a part in a play to open in San Francisco, February 1.

Besides asking a divorce, Miss Barrie's suit demands a part of Barrymore's property, $10,000 attorneys' fees, $1,000 to "cover court costs"

WPA WORKERS ASK MORE RELIEF JOBS

2,500 Stage Parade in Nation's Capitol and Demand Increase in Wages

KIDNAPER HUNTERS SEEK DEGENERATE

Court Records Studied for Clue; Ex-Convict, Ex-Mental Patient Held

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 15.—(AP)—A reliable source indicated tonight Justice Department agents are seeking a degenerate for the kidnap-murder of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, but do not know his identity.

The source said the agents secured tonight from local authorities records of numerous persons involved in criminal trials, including a number implicated in degeneracy cases.

From the number of records requested, the source deduced the hunt has not produced clues sufficient to center the agents' attention on any particular person.

The theory an unbalanced person was involved frequently has been expressed, due to certain odd circumstances indicating the abduction December 27 was not the work of a "professional" kidnap gang. Tonight's revelation was the first definite support for that supposition.

Charles' body was found nude in a clump of brush Monday, 15 days after he was stolen from the living room of the family home. The odd

Woman Judge Fined On Speeding Charge

SARASOTA, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP) Judge Anna M. Kross, of the magistrate court of New York city, was convicted today of reckless driving and Mayor O. A. Smith, judge of municipal court, fined her $25.

Although the case previously had been continued until today to permit introduction of additional testimony in Judge Kross' behalf, no witnesses were heard today.

The woman jurist did not appear in court today. Her attorney, J. J. Williams Jr., paid the fine.

Judge Kross was arrested by Sarasota police on a charge of driving her car at 50 miles an hour through a school restricted traffic zone. She pleaded innocent at a preliminary hearing before Mayor Smith.

MOYERS GUILTY; GIVEN SENTENCE OF 5 TO 10 YEARS

Former Liberty League Organizer Is Convicted in $30,000 Armed Holdup of Thomas K. Glenn.

William T. Moyers, former Georgia organizer for the American Liberty League, on trial the past three days for the alleged $30,000 holdup-robbery of Thomas K. Glenn, Atlanta banker, was found guilty in Fulton superior court yesterday of robbery by intimidation. The jury deliberated two and one-half hours.

The jury recommended the defendant be sentenced to serve a minimum of five years and a maximum of 10. Judge Paul S. Etheridge immediately made the recommendation the sentence of the court.

George Finch, chief counsel for the defense, announced a motion for a new trial will be filed this morning.

Earlier in the afternoon, Judge Etheridge had charged the jury to return a verdict of guilty if they found Moyers had used force or intimidation in obtaining the money, a verdict of "not guilty" if it were found no force or fear had been employed.

The case went to the jury at 2:50 o'clock and the verdict was returned at 5:20 o'clock.

Denied Force Used.

Defense attorneys in their argument yesterday denied Moyers obtained the money through "force and intimidation or at the point of a gun." Finch said his client was given the money upon verbal demand, and following a brief whispered conference between Glenn and Ernest Woodruff, Atlanta capitalist in whose office the robbery is alleged to have occurred. Woodruff, Finch maintained, turned to Moyers and said, "Well, Bill, I will give you the money."

Solicitor General John A. Boykin and Assistant Solicitor Ed Stephens contended the money was obtained through force and intimidation and in view of this it was robbery wheth-

BUCKET SHOP CASE IN U.S. COURT TODAY

Judge To Hear Motions and Demurrers by Kopald-Quinn Defendants.

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood this morning will hear motions and demurrers filed in behalf of 24 defendants in the Kopald-Quinn "bucket shop" cases brought by the government under the Securities and Exchange act.

Associated with United States District Attorney Lawrence S. Camp in handling the case for the government will be Guy Bard, a special assistant to the attorney general, who arrived here yesterday morning from Washington.

Approximately 20 attorneys will represent the 24 defendants, court attaches said.

Test of New Deal Act.

The charges are in the nature of a test on the constitutionality of the New Deal measure for the protection of the nation's investors.

They are booked against the Kopald-Quinn Company and a group of affiliates. The original indictments were returned at Gainesville. Several of the companies operated in Atlanta.

Also set for hearing today are habeas corpus petitions brought in behalf of three prisoners at the Atlanta federal penitentiary. Most notorious of the trio seeking freedom is Ignazio Saietta, better known as "Lupo the Wolf." Court attaches said he got this

STATE 'NEW DEAL' BRINGS MEASURES FOR SCHOOLS' AID

Assembly Bills in Page 17.

Georgia legislators moved yesterday to extend the state's financial obligation for operating common schools, to reorganize several governmental departments, and to raise more revenue to support the program of Governor Rivers.

While members of the general assembly proposed bills to carry out his program, Rivers removed A. L. Henson, veteran's service officer, on an accusation fees he collected four years ago "had not been turned in," and sent to the legislators an auditor's report showing unreported collections in the 1936 accounts of the Department of Agriculture.

Rivers also gained control of another department when G. B. Carreker resigned as chairman of the State Revenue Commission. The Governor named Judge J. B. Jones, of Gainesville, to succeed him.

Joiner's Ouster.

Jones joined with Comptroller General William B. Harrison to form a majority for the three-man commission and oust W. L. Joiner, who was head of the motor vehicle division under the Talmadge regime. They replaced him with Marcus McWhorter, who formerly held the place.

Before resignation of Carreker, however, the senate yesterday had received a bill proposing reorganization of the revenue commission. This move came ostensibly as an answer to Rivers' call for Talmadge appointees controlling important state boards or commissions to "resign or be legislated out of office."

The house also received a reorganization measure. This one applied to the state board of education, under which the seven-month guaranteed terms for all common schools of the state and the free textbook measures

COUCH PREVENTS BUDGET BALANCE

Councilman Refuses To Vote Cut in Pay Checks Under $100 Per Month.

Within $62,000 of balancing the 1937 budget under a plan to reduce personnel 6 per cent and to cut salaries uniformly 5 per cent below $100 and 10 per cent above that amount, the finance committee of city council adjourned last night with no chance of presenting a unanimous report to council Monday afternoon.

Failure to strike the balance by authorizing the city comptroller, B. Graham West, and Alderman E. A. Gilliam, committee chairman, to take out $62,000 additional from proposed appropriations resulted when Councilman J. Allen Couch refused to vote to cut employes making less than $100 a month.

At the beginning the budget was out of balance $572,000 but under a plan offered by Councilman Frank Wilson, department heads would be ordered to eliminate 6 per cent of their pay rolls by personnel reductions, after which all employes would be cut 5 and 10 per cent in the two brackets, and $80,000 would be taken from appropriations to bring the difference between anticipated income and disbursements to $61,500 exactly.

This plan was favored by Wilson, Gilliam and Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen, but Couch would not agree al-

The radio engineer and one-time employe at Aimee's Angelus temple, underwent an appendix operation Sunday. He was 41.

Of Sister Aimee's many publicized incidents, none drew the attention that attended her startling disappearance from a beach near Los Angeles in the spring of 1926 and the investigation which followed her reappearance.

Clad in a bathing suit, she vanished so suddenly it was feared she had drowned.

Her mother, Mrs. Minnie (Ma) Kennedy, was so certain of her daughter's death she declared Aimee undoubtedly was "in the arms of Jesus."

But six weeks later the comely evangelist reappeared in Mexico, across the border from Douglas, Ariz., with a story she had been abducted and held prisoner by unidentified kidnapers.

Terming her story "a hoax," the district attorney's office began its $150,000 investigation which brought Ormiston into the case.

Prosecutors presented a grand jury with evidence intended to prove that he and Mrs. McPherson had been seen together during the time Aimee was supposedly a captive in Mexico. Witnesses testified they saw the two in a Carmel, Cal., cottage.

Both Mrs. McPherson and Ormiston denied it. Ormiston declared in an affidavit that the woman with him in Carmel was a "Mrs. X." From the pulpit, Sister Aimee called the investigation a "sinister move by enemies" who she said were embarrassed by her campaign against sin. Her congregation gave generously to a defense fund.

The county got nowhere with its investigation and the district attorney dropped the inquiry with the remark that Aimee, her mother and Ormiston, "stood convicted, anyway, by public opinion."

For the past several years Ormiston had been employed as an engineer by the Columbia Broadcasting Company.

Judge Jones Is Sworn in as Revenue Head

The new chairman of the State Revenue Commission, Judge J. B. Jones, of Gainesville, shown above as he received his oath of office yesterday from Governor Rivers, an act which resulted in wholesale dismissal of Talmadge appointees under the commission. Governor Rivers told Jones he expected him "to carry out the mandate of the people."

HORNSBY IS GIVEN "TICKET" CONTROL

66 Supernumeraries Cut From Force; Charges Against Melton Dropped

Authority to cancel traffic tickets was taken from Captain Jack Malcolm and given to Acting Chief M. A. Hornsby last night by the police committee as it investigated reports of wholesale "ticket fixing" by the captain.

At the first regular meeting of the 1937 committee, 66 supernumeraries were lopped off and charges against Patrolman J. S. Melton for failing to co-operate with police in locating a stolen car he was convicted of possessing, were dismissed after trial.

The committee told Chief Hornsby to "see that all tickets made out by the officers of the department are placed on the dockets" and the chief was asked to cancel only those given to persons living in distant cities who are unfamiliar with city ordinances.

Hornsby reported that out of 771 tickets given from December 1 to January 8, 338 were "fixed" but that since January 8 only one ticket was cancelled.

Captain Malcom, whose work in traffic study was praised by committeemen and Chief T. O. Sturdivant, told the committee that he will "reduce automobile accident deaths from 85 to 50 within two years or resign."

Bridges for Change.

Alderman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of the committee, was the only member who insisted on a change in the traffic department but the issue was not put to a vote.

Among other actions taken by the committee were: Authority for the mayor to arrange finances for Chief Hornsby to visit several cities where schools for new policemen are conducted with the view of installing such a school here; ordered Hornsby to investigate a "racket" on issuing copies of charges to persons arrested

MUSICIAN FREED IN DEATH OF GIRL

Court Orders Attack-Murder Charges Dismissed; Mother Pleased.

NORWICH, Conn., Jan. 15.—(AP)—A three-judge tribunal today acquitted Robert A. Simpson, blond band leader, of blame in the death of 17-year-old Ellen Sullivan, after the state joined defense counsel in a motion to dismiss charges of murder and criminal assault.

"The judges are of the unanimous opinion that the state has failed to make out a case of either murder or rape against the accused. For that reason the case is dismissed, the accused is found not guilty and ordered discharged."

The curly-haired Simpson, center of the summer seashore sensation that flared after the girl died, ran to his mother, Mrs. Arthur Simpson, who sat in the courtroom with Mrs. Maude Sullivan, mother of the dead girl.

Mother Satisfied.

Mrs. Sullivan covered her face with her hands and shuddered, saying only:

"I'm not disappointed. I'm satisfied with the verdict."

The 23-year-old band leader was accused of causing the injuries which resulted in the death of Miss Sullivan, a telephone operator, in a hospital at New London last July 20.

She had plunged 25 feet from the window of the Danceland Casino at Ocean Beach early in the morning of July 18.

The state charged Simpson assaulted her and that in the struggle she was thrown through the window.

Simpson said he had had a few glasses of beer with the girl at a nearby tavern after the dance hall closed; that she accompanied him to the casino where he went to get his musical instruments; that she became ill and he helped her into the dance hall to

Cobb Says: World War Is Proof

By IRVIN S. COBB.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Jan. 15. The government says the surviving Indians are actually increasing in number. I started to add that this proves the Indians are holding their own, but, since we've left them very little of their own to hold, I stayed my hand.

The Navahoes have always been the most independent and aloof of all the tribesmen. For the most part, they continue to live a nomadic existence, following their ancient beliefs and ceremonials, refusing to be caged in towns, yet, numerically, and in material possessions, they outgrow any other tribe.

Can it be that the white man's culture, which we so jealously strive to cram down the gullets of red people and black and brown and yellow, isn't always what the victims need?

But, of course, to say that is practically to admit our civilization might have a few tiny flaws in it, whereas we know it to be the one perfect creation of man, and for proof point to its crowning achievement, the late World War,

FORMER TAX HEAD GIVES RESIGNATION FROM SICK BED

M'WHORTER NAMED VEHICLE DIRECTOR

Henson Is Dismissed From Veterans' Service Post; Askew Installed as Acting Chairman.

The Rivers "house cleaning" at the state capitol was launched yesterday when appointees of the new administration announced dismissal of nearly 100 Talmadge appointees following the resignation of Chairman G. B. Carreker, of the State Revenue Commission, and appointment of Judge J. B. Jones, of Gainesville, to the post.

The dismissals were ordered in the income tax division of the revenut department and in the motor vehicle division, where scores of Talmadge appointees had been placed in the latter days of the last administration in the hope that it would be the last bureau to be reached by the new administration.

Judge Jones was named a member of the Revenue Commission and he immediately held a meeting with Comptroller General William B. Harrison and was elected to the chairmanship. Commissioner A. L. Crowe, the only Talmadgeite remaining on the board, did not participate in the meeting.

Governor Rivers told both Judge Jones and Comptroller General Harrison that he expected them to carry out the mandate of the people and remove every vestige of Talmadgeism from their departments of the state capitol. They both assured him that this would be done.

McWhorter Named.

Chairman Jones' first act was to announce the appointment of Marcus P. McWhorter, of Atlanta, to be director of the motor vehicle division. He replaces W. L. Joiner, who has served throughout the Talmadge administration.

The dismissals were effected by Chairman Jones and Director Mc Whorter.

1,000 Georgians Plan Trip to Inauguration

Nearly 1,000 Georgians are expected to board the Rivers Special Monday night for Washington to participate in the ceremonies attendant upon the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

The Governor's special train, over the Seaboard Air Line, will be parked in the Washington yards throughout the ceremony and many of those attending from here will make their homes on board.

H. E. Pleasants, assistant passenger agent for the Seaboard, said yesterday that a flood of reservations had poured in on him the last few days and that he would have to close the train today.

"No more reservations can be made after noon Saturday," he said. "If people want to attend they must inform us by this hour or we cannot take care of them."

FRANCE PICKS EXPERT IN FINANCIAL MATTERS FOR U. S. AMBASSADOR

Georges Bonnett, Who Would Settle War Debts, Reveals Acceptance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Georges Bonnet, French financial expert who would like to see a new war debt settlement, soon will replace Andre de Laboulaye as ambassador to the United States.

Disclosing his acceptance of the post today, in Paris, Bonnet said he would come to Washington "simply as ambassador" with "no special mission concerning war debts."

His reputation in the field of finance caused speculation here, however, that he might seek to re-open the debt question. Reduction of the obligation, in exchange for a resumption of French payments, has been mentioned as a possible basis for settlement.

Bonnet, former minister of finance, already is acquainted with Secretary of State Hull. They met at the London Economic Conference in 1933, where Bonnet was chief of the French delegation.

The financial expert's appointment will deprive President Roosevelt, however, of the companionship of an old friend.

André de Laboulaye, the retiring ambassador, was counselor of the French embassy here while Mr. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of navy in World War days.

He became ambassador April 15, 1933, a short time after his friend entered the White House.

De Laboulaye has been popular in diplomatic circles. He is a career diplomat, widely known for tact.

He helped last year to negotiate a trade agreement which state department officials say has increased Franco-American commerce substantially.

recover; and that as she leaned out of the window she fell.

Story Is Told.

His story was told on the stand by patrolmen who arrested him and heard his version of the incident.

Dr. Charles Kaufman, New London medical examiner, testified an autopsy showed Miss Sullivan had been criminally assaulted before she fell.

Morris Lubchansky and Samuel Persky, defense counsel, asked for dismissal of the charges after 23 witnesses had testified for the state.

State Prosecutor Arthur M. Brown, who was defeated last November as the Republican candidate for Governor, agreed the state had not proved a murder case, but said he felt that the case should be continued on the assault charge.

Persky argued:

"Bob Simpson's story—which we know—will clear him of rape, but it will leave a mark on the mothers and families of those involved that should be avoided if there is any possible way."

Thin and pale from six months in prison, Simpson was congratulated by the townsfolk who knew him, by the youngsters who danced to his band's tunes.

He said he would reorganize his band and continue playing.

He is also credited with having practically wiped out the Capone affiliated gang in Brooklyn, New York. The others presenting petitions are Monroe C. Bridwell and John A. Johnson, convicted of counterfeiting in Charleston two years ago. They claim they were not given legal counsel at their trial.

Because of the far-reaching effect of the petitions, should they be granted, Walter Gallagher, of the attorney general's office, has been sent from Washington to co-operate with Assistant District Attorney H. H. Tysinger, considered an expert in the type of case up for hearing today.

"Lupo" was originally jailed under a 30-year sentence for counterfeiting in 1910. He was given a conditional pardon by President Harding in 1920. This pardon was revoked by President Roosevelt last July and "Lupo" was remanded to the penitentiary here to complete service of the original sentence. He maintains the revocation was illegal.

RAIL UNIONS CONSIDER COMPROMISE PAY PLAN

Increases Favored Which Will Sustain Wage Differentials.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—(AP)—A compromise proposal for wage increase involving both a percentage and flat rate basis was considered tonight by officials of the Conductors and Engineers Brotherhoods.

T. C. Cashen, of Buffalo, N. Y., president of the Switchmen of North America, said that his group, acting in concert with the trainmen and firemen units, had favored a wage boost plan which kept intact the wage differentials existing between those groups and the higher paid conductors and engineers.

The latter groups agreed to consider the proposal and report their conclusions at a joint meeting of the five brotherhoods tomorrow.

Cashen said the plan approved by the three junior units incorporated the percentage principle for yard service workers and a flat rate boost for road service men. This, he explained, would keep the differentials constant.

The conductors and engineers have thus far in the deliberations stood pat on demands for a wage boost based solely on percentage.

David B. Robertson, of Cleveland, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Enginemen and Firemen, said that the junior unions have shown a willingness to "meet the others half way" with the view to reaching an agreement that would be mutually acceptable.

All the unions represented at the conference have workers in both the yard and road services.

Illustrative of how a percentage increase would widen the differential was this example offered by a spokesman: If a conductor was getting $8 and a trainman $6 and each received a 10 per cent increase, the conductor would get $8.80 and the trainman $6.60, making the differential $2.20 instead of $2.

the Workers' Alliance of America.

Their demands, presented by committees to the White House and both houses of congress, included:

A deficiency appropriation of $1,040,000,000 to carry WPA until July 1 (President Roosevelt asked congress for $650,000,000); employment of 2,800,000 WPA workers until that date; and a 20 per cent increase in monthly wages.

WPA records showed 2,284,000 at work on relief jobs on December 12.

The workers marched four abreast down Pennsylvania avenue carrying banners and shouting, "we want jobs" after the fashion of a college football crowd. As they passed President Roosevelt's office their cry changed to:

"Before election, 'yes,' and after election, 'no.'"

A delegation of 10, headed by President Davis Lasser, of the Workers' Alliance, called at the White House. Other groups dropped out of the parade to confer with Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead.

President Roosevelt did not see them, but Marvin McIntyre, a White House secretary, promised them their demands would be laid before the President.

"I assure you the President will see your request and it will be given careful consideration," McIntyre said. "This demand won't go in the waste basket."

At the nearby chamber of commerce building, a committee presented a special set of demands to Sibley, challenging the chamber "to provide jobs in private industry at a decent living wage."

"It is not the chamber of commerce policy abruptly to halt relief," Sibley told them. "We believe it should be tapered off."

Lasser described Sibley as "very courteous and considerate."

WHISKY BILL APPROVED BY ALABAMA SENATORS

Carolina Legislators Urged To Study Governmental Reorganization.

By the Associated Press.

Governmental reorganization, suggested on a national scale by President Roosevelt, came before the North Carolina legislature yesterday when Paul V. McNutt, former Governor of Indiana, urged the legislators to "have the courage to make needed changes in the system of representative government."

While the Carolinians mulled over McNutt's suggestion for a "critical and searching examination of the governmental setup in general," Alabama wrestled with the liquor question.

The senate passed a bill to repeal the 22-year-old state prohibition law and to provide a state-store system, but tacked on a referendum rider which sent the measure back to the house for reconsideration. Before the house could vote on the altered bill, the legislature recessed for the Washington inauguration.

Mississippi's miles of mud and gravel roads are giving way to paving, Governor Hugh White told his legislature, affirming that the state would complete 1,700 miles of highway under an original bond issue of $42,500,000, plus an original $9,500,000 which he said would be supplied.

In Arkansas, a legislative committee, prepared to investigate charges of general lawlessness at Hot Springs, asserted prospective witnesses were being intimidated. The committee coupled its charge that "high pressure" was being used with the statement "no kind of pressure, political or otherwise, will deter the committee from doing its full duty."

The Kentucky house adopted a tobacco production control bill and sent it to the senate, where a resolution also had been introduced to allow the Governor to call a 15-day tobacco market holiday to allow sagging prices to rebound.

CHAIN GANG SENTENCE METED TO CAFE MAN

Liquor Case Defendant Sharply Rapped by Criminal Court Judge.

Restaurateurs who sell liquor in their places of business are engaging in unfair competition with those who are trying to operate honestly and within the law, Judge Jesse Wood, of Fulton criminal court, declared yesterday in sentencing Nick Johnson, manager of the Ship Ahoy restaurant on Luckie street, to serve 12 months on the chain gang and pay a $500 fine for violating the state prohibition law.

City officers raided the cafe on November 23 and confiscated 48 pints of liquor.

Johnson pleaded not guilty and denied all knowledge of the liquor being on the premises. The defendant filed notice of appeal and posted $2,000 bond.

"I have no sympathy with you," the judge told Johnson. "If there was a disturbance in your place you would seek the protection of the law. You owe the law your respect and obedience."

BALANCING OF BUDGET PREVENTED BY COUCH

though he did say he would not fight it in council unless he presented a budget amendment.

Payless Pay Day Seen.

The failure to strike the balance practically assures a payless pay day for city employes Wednesday, since bankers have informed city officials they will not lend Atlanta any money until the budget is balanced and adopted. It was considered improbable the budget would be in shape for council Monday.

Mayor Hartsfield, who attended the session for awhile during the afternoon, appealed to the majority of the department heads who were present, to "do all in your power to help the city in its financial dilemma."

Approximately 20 department heads came to the meeting in answer to the resolution passed by the committee Thursday asking the names of persons who could be eliminated from the pay roll. Tax Assessor J. Sid Tiller, acting as group spokesman, requested until Monday to furnish the information, which was not wanted after Wilson's plan was explained to them.

Several departments cannot operate with reduced personnel and these would be exempted under Wilson's plan. Among such departments are the mayor's office, the law department, recorders' court, and the city warden.

Savings Listed.

The committee, in cutting expenses, counted a saving of $40,000 in the police department through elimination of approximately 20 clerks, and $17,000 in the fire department through elimination of 10 jobs, but most of the other departments would be required to reduce personnel costs six per cent. This means department heads can eliminate one $200-a-month job or two $100 jobs to save the same amount.

Department heads arose yesterday in several cases to declare their departments cannot render proper service with elimination of any employe.

Wilson's plan also cuts the amount of emergency relief from the total of $105,000 set up earlier in the week to $80,000, which would include the $25,000 already promised for the month of January.

The county has refused to allocate more for relief in the city than the city gives itself, and with the proposed cut in the smaller appropriation by Atlanta it seemed certain that the department of public welfare would be discontinued.

The near-balance also carried elimination of all contributions by the city to private charities. Appropriations for various operating and material accounts also were trimmed.

The sheet does not provide anything for equipping the auditorium, providing new police cars, or new fire-fighting equipment nor for the reduction of the deficit.

"We are just about where we were when we began," said Chairman Gilliam at the end of the session.

Councilman John A. White and Councilman Cecil Hester, committee members, were both ill and absent from the meeting. Gilliam did not call another meeting.

Mysterious Phone Number Linked To Guardsman in Flogging Probe

JOSEPH S. GELDERS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Senate investigators used a hitherto mysterious telephone number today to link the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company with a national guard officer whom an Alabama flogging victim had identified as one of his assailants.

The number, Birmingham 3-2664, had bobbed up repeatedly as the senate civil liberties committee sought details of the abduction and flogging of Joseph S. Gelders, southern representative of the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners.

Officials of "T. C. I.," as the company subsidiary of United States Steel, is known in Alabama, were asked yesterday if they were familiar with the number. They said they had no knowledge of it. One of them was Borden Burr, T. C. I. counsel, who introduced Alfred E. Smith at the famous Liberty League dinner a year ago.

Letter From Firm.

Chairman La Follette produced today a letter from the telephone company at Birmingham, saying it was the number of an unlisted telephone in the T. C. I. offices and a witness told of using it repeatedly to reach Captain Walter J. "Crack" Hanna, the officer in question.

Previous testimony had been that Hanna was "supposed to be connected with T. C. I." as a special investigator in labor matters. An investigator for the state police who handled the Gelders case attributed failure to obtain an indictment of Hanna to fear that it might antagonize the T. C. I. Company.

Yelverton Cowherd, Alabama attorney, and today's principal witness, told of a conversation with Hanna on the day of the flogging. He said Hanna asked "What are we going to do about that So-and-So Gelders," at that time agitating for the release of a young Communist held in jail without bail, under a law since declared unconstitutional.

Employed By Firm.

Another witness, Cary E. Haigler, testified Hanna had told him he was employed by T. C. I. Birmingham's chief of detectives told the committee that after Gelders' flogging, a representative of the company conferred with the chief of police who later said he believed "there'll be no more whippings in this district."

Charles J. Lenz, Birmingham fuel dealer, said that a material witness in the case, George M. Brooks, became highly nervous and worried. But Lenz added that after Brooks had communicated with Major Harry E. Smith, of the national guard, he calmed down and even spoke of the possibility of being offered a position and of taking a vacation.

Major Smith's name also bobbed up in Cowherd's testimony. Smith told him, he said, that 15 of 17 national guard officers stationed locally were "on the pay roll" of T. C. I. at that time, Cowherd said. Smith was anxious to learn what the attorney intended to do in connection with an approaching grand jury hearing on the question of indicting Hanna.

The prosecuting officer knew, Cowherd said, of his conversation with Hanna on the day of the flogging, but he never was called to appear before the grand jury.

Giles First Witness.

Grover Cleveland Giles, Birmingham's chief of detectives, who did some work on the Gelders case, was the day's first witness. The principal point of his testimony was that W. R. Simms, in charge of special deputy sheriffs employed by T. C. I., called on the chief of police after the Gelders flogging and the two were closeted together for more than an hour.

"Did the chief ever tell you what happened?" he was asked.

"The chief came out kind of smiling and told me whippings, he believed, were over in this district."

Lenz testified to the actions of Brooks, a witness in the case. Brooks, from the window of the Lenz office, had seen a man leave an automobile and throw some torn papers and a sawed-off baseball bat into a near-by field. He jotted down the license number and reported the incident to the police. The papers proved to be Gelders' and the license number that of Hanna's automobile.

Very Much Worried.

"Brooks was very much worried after he got into this thing," Lenz said. "He got worried to the extent of buying a gun. And he was taking quite a few drinks. He made the remark that he felt like he was on the spot."

"Did anyone communicate with him on this matter?"

"I know of parties communicating with him but whether on this matter, I can't say."

"Who communicated with him?"

"Major Harry E. Smith, of the national guard called and said he'd like to talk to Mr. Brooks."

"Did you notice any change in Brooks' attitude or demeanor after the conversation."

"He didn't seem to be quite so nervous."

"Did Brooks say anything after the conversation regarding going on a vacation or taking a position."

"Not right after the conversation. A little later on during one of his spells when he had too much joy, he did say he might be able to take a vacation, and that someone might call him and offer him a position. But in fairness to Mr. Brooks, I want it to be understood that he was under the influence of liquor."

Brooks Called Next.

Brooks was called next, but only one question was put to him: Whether he could corroborate the previous testimony. He replied that he could "with slight deviations."

Haigler, a foreman in the Conservation Corps, described a conversation with Hanna last October. He told the militia officer he was living at Clanton, a town near the spot at which Gelders was flogged.

"He remarked that that was the place where they beat up the reds," Haigler said, adding the aside: "There was a good deal of profanity mixed up in this."

"Well, just skip the profanity," said Chairman La Follette, Progressive, Wisconsin, of the senate committee.

"I said people who did that ought to be in the penitentiary," the witness remarked.

Favored Beating.

Hanna, he continued, asserted he was in favor of "beating up the reds."

"I asked him who he was with. He said the T. C. I. I told him I supposed that was a good place to flop, but that I hadn't any love for them. He said that he did; that they had been good to him."

Cowherd said that in 1935 he became chairman of the Americanization committee of a Birmingham American Legion chapter and later was chairman of a similar committee for the adjoining district. The work, he said, was financed in part by Hanna.

"I don't know who gave the money to Hanna," he said.

"Did you ever call Captain Hanna on the telephone?"

"Yes, many times."

"By what number?"

"3-2664."

List of Members.

From Hanna, he said he once received a list of members of the bookkeepers and stenographers union.

"I asked him for a copy of the list but he said, "'I can't give this to you. I must return it to Milton McDuff.'"

McDuff was identified yesterday as the son of the county sheriff, and head of a private detective agency, to whom members of the union were referred for the list after it had been seized by the police in a raid.

On September 23, the date of the floggings, Cowherd said, Hanna came to his office about midday.

"Hanna used an oath and said, 'Pal, what are we going to do about this So-and-So Gelders?'"

Cowherd said he reached for a folder of papers having to do with Gelders. He had been investigating Gelders.

"I replied what do you mean 'we,'" Cowherd said, "I don't know what you have in mind, but I don't intend to do anything."

He told Hanna he had investigated Gelders and found his reputation for truthfulness and honesty was of the highest, and that apparently someone had "made an awful bobble" on the case of Jack Barton, the Communist whose release from jail Gelders was seeking.

Cowherd said he first learned of the flogging from the papers next day and that immediately he wrote six names on a piece of paper and sent them to a Mr. Mitchell, connected with the State Federation of Labor, asserting he was confident that "three of the six were in on the flogging."

"Two of them had since been identified with the incident," he added.

At the conclusion of Cowherd's testimony, Chairman La Follette read into the record the following letter from the local telephone company:

"This is to certify or advise that local Birmingham telephone number 3-2664 is an unlisted number for a telephone located in the offices of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, fifteenth floor, Brown-Marx building, Birmingham, Ala. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company pays the monthly bill for the above named telephone."

18-DAY TRUCE ADOPTED BY AUTO DISPUTANTS

Peace Moves Accelerated in Flat Glass and Maritime Industries.

By the Associated Press.

Employers and employes involved in far-flung labor disputes quickened their steps along the path toward peace yesterday.

An 18-day armistice permitted spokesmen for the management and the United Automobile Workers of America to prepare for the opening of negotiations for a permanent settlement of the strike at General Motors Corporation plants. Conciliatory moves gained momentum in the strikes in the flat glass and maritime industries.

Together, these three controversies have resulted in the unemployment of the great majority of the nation's 200,000 strike idle and have caused wage and business losses estimated at approximately $500,000,000.

Major Developments.

These were the major developments along the strike front:

1. Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan announced both sides in the automotive conflict had agreed to the truce after a 17-hour parley. General Motors agreed not to re-open strike-closed factories. The union agreed to remove "sit down" strikers from the corporation's property. Executive Vice President Wiliam S. Knudson of General Motors and President Homer Martin of the United Automobile Workers Union planned to meet today at Detroit to arrange details of the peace parley scheduled to start here Monday.

2. Demobilization of 2,300 national guardsmen began at Flint, Mich. They were rushed there to preserve peace after a clash at a General Motors branch there left 27 injured Monday night.

3. The union decided to have the "sit down" strikers march from the Guide Lamp plant at Anderson, Ind., today and from the Cadillac and Fleetwood plants at Detroit and the Fisher Body plants at Flint Sunday—to the tunes of a brass band.

To Reopen Plants.

4. General Motors arranged to re-open on a reduced basis some of its branches which closed because of parts shortages.

5. The General Motors jobless force passed the 115,000 mark.

6. Federal Mediator Ralph Lind announced definite progress in efforts to terminate a strike of 7,000 workers at Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company plants. Labor Leader Philip Murray planned to confer with officials of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company today concerning the walkout of 6,000 unionists.

7. Secretary of Labor Perkins reported progress in the moves to end the maritime impasse on the west coast. Longshoremen's Leader Harry Bridges said: "We want the strike ended."

LANGER CONTESTS SUIT ASKING HIS REMOVAL

BISMARCK, N. D., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Counsel for Governor William Langer challenged the right of former Governor Walter Welford to bring an action contesting his election in district court today and asked the proceedings be dismissed.

Following arguments by Francis Murphy, of Fargo, attorney for Langer, and C. Leibert Crum, Welford counsel, Judge Fred Jansonius granted Crum five days to file further written answer to Murphy's contentions and took the case under advisement.

Welford charged Langer violated the corrupt practices act by promising appointments and exceeding maximum campaign expenditures, and asked the court to remove the new Governor.

Murphy contended that the court had no jurisdiction in the case.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Rescuers reached four persons stranded more than a week in a desolate, snowbound mine camp in the desert 125 miles from here today but shortage of gasoline delayed the return trip.

$6,000 Diamond Suit Ends After Long Row

A long legal battle for possession of $6,000 worth of diamonds apparently was ended in Fulton superior court last night when a jury ordered the jewels turned over to Mrs. Andrew Stakes, plaintiff.

Mrs. Stakes claimed she held a bill of sale from her uncle, L. E. LeGrand, of Columbia, S. C., who is at present confined at Georgia Baptist hospital, for the diamonds, but that Mrs. Mary Martin, of Columbia, who has cared for her uncle for the past several years, possessed them. She claims she purchased the rings in 1931.

When Mrs. Martin came to Atlanta recently Mrs. Stakes took out a bail of trover against her and entered suit to recover the diamonds.

'OYSTER KING' IS FREED OF MAIL FRAUD CHARGE

Popham's Wife and Former Florida Official Are Also Exonerated.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 15.—(UP)—William Lee Popham, former mayor of Apalachicola and self-styled "oyster king," tonight was acquitted of fraud charges by a federal court jury that deliberated four hours.

Popham is a former inmate of the Atlanta penitentiary.

Acquitted with Popham was his wife and William A. McRae, former Florida commissioner of agriculture. Mrs. Popham was cleared earlier today when United States District Judge Louie W. Strum granted a defense motion for a directed verdict.

The motion for a directed verdict for Mrs. Popham was based on the contention that she had not taken a personal interest in direction of Cultivated Oyster Farms, Inc., the firm on which the government founded its fraud charges.

Art of Oyster Growing.

The trial, one of the most technical in the history of the Jacksonville federal court, went to the jury at 2 p. m. today after lengthy final arguments from both government and defense.

The case was climaxed yesterday when the former Apalachicola mayor went to the witness stand in his own behalf to deliver a six-hour dissertation on the art of cultivating oysters.

The government charged that Popham and his associates were guilty of fraud in inducing outsiders to invest funds in the concern with the promise of huge profits.

Popham, testifying in his own defense, claimed he acted in good faith throughout his operations and asserted that all promises would have been fulfilled had not the government and postal inspectors stepped in.

Subscriptions Cancelled.

He testified that more than $1,300,000 in subscriptions was paid into his firm through its advertising and promotion campaign. Following launching of the investigation by government agents, however, he claimed a "whispering campaign" was started that brought cancellation of more than $1,000,000 of these subscriptions.

Commissions on these subscriptions had to be paid despite the cancellations, he said, causing the corporation to pocket a loss of more than $150,000.

Popham said he virtually is penniless today and testified he is living on $15 weekly, advanced by a brother.

HUNDREDS FLEE HOMES IN MIDWESTERN FLOOD

Highways Engulfed as Rising Streams Spread Over Ohio Lowlands.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Hundreds of lowlanders fled before the steady advance of flood waters in the midwest today.

Some left threatened homes on foot. Others were brought out in small boats. But the refugees were cheered by a forecast of fair and colder weather—expected to end protracted rains and check the swift rise of overburdened streams n the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

Considerable damage and distress was reported. Jay county, Indiana, officials called conditions the "worst since 1913." Railroad and interurban traffic was disrupted in the inundated areas of that state. Nearly 100,000 acres were submerged near Evansville. Many highways were engulfed. A long freight train toppled from the rails near Edinburg. In some districts the icy waters covered houses and barns.

Breaks Through Levee.

The brimming St. Francis river broke through a levee near Rombauer, Mo., and the Black river poured through an embankment south of Poplar Bluff. National guardsmen evacuated more than 100 families from the danger zone. One thousand WPA workmen strengthened sea walls. Clear creek burst two levees and surged over eight square miles of farm land in Union and Alexander counties in Illinois.

The Kaskaskia river lapped near the top of the levee near Vandalia, Ill. It reached the highest level since the 1930 floods. The Wabash river went out of its banks and moved across thousands of acres in the Mt. Carmel vicinity. Farmers left for higher ground. Rural schools closed. Three mines were idle. Mayor Harry Crisp, of Marion, supervised the rescue of 35 persons. They were quartered in a school building. Boat crews carried 75 families to safety in the Harrisburg section after more than four inches of rain fell.

Ohio Swelled.

The broad Ohio swelled to within inches of the 52-feet flood stage at Cincinnati but Meteorologist W. C. Devereaux said a slackening in rate of rise indicated the upper valley would escape a damaging inundation.

Just 10 months ago, the crest of one of the nation's most disastrous floods moved down the Ohio. Last March, streams on both sides of the Appalachian watershed spilled their waters on 13 states. Property losses were estimated at $300,000,000. Hundreds perished.

The great Miami receded today after dozens of residents had vacated homes near Trenton and Engles Corner, Ohio but the Ohio river crept further over lowlands below Louisville. More than 100 persons evacuated houses near Hamilton and Newtown. Approximately 50 others were ferried from marooned homes in that neighborhood and along Big Walnut creek east of Columbus.

Approaches Peak.

The Allegheny river approached the peak of last March at Franklin, Pa. Tributaries edged over surrounding territory and roads at some points.

Creeks and streams edged up to new high marks in Tennessee. Lowlanders retreated from menaced areas.

The Mississippi river continued its slow but steady rise toward flood stage, fed by swollen tributary streams.

United States district engineers kept a close watch on the big river, although confident there is no danger to the levee system. A bulletin said the "flood outlook is very favorable."

16-YEAR-OLD ADMITS TACOMA CASE INSPIRED $10,000 KIDNAP HOAX

Reading About Mattson Boy, Youth Thought He Could 'Get Away' With It

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Austin Ryan, 16-year-old high school student, was in jail tonight charged with suspicion of blackmail because, according to the police version, he "just wanted a thrill" and thought he could "get away" with a $10,000 extortion plot.

When he appeared in the police lineup, the six-foot youth told police he had followed closely the Mattson kidnap case and then wrote ransom notes, demanding $10,000, to Bert J. Young, of New Rochelle, N. Y., whose son, Robert, a school chum of the prisoner, has been missing since January 4.

To Inspector Joseph J. Donovan, Ryan stuttered miserably:

"I'd been reading about the Mattson case out west and I thought I'd be able to get some money so I could travel around the world."

He said his desire to emulate the "snatch racketeers" was inspired by reading detective stories.

"Don't you think the Mattson boy killers will get caught?" Inspector Donovan asked.

"I—I don't know. I guess they will," the youth sobbed.

Ryan was arrested when he appeared in a Mount Vernon stationery store yesterday and naively told the proprietor he needed a go-between in the "Young case." Previously Ryan had planned communication with the missing boy's father by insertion of advertisements in a Mount Vernon newspaper.

Robert Young, the missing youth, disappeared 11 days ago after he had been reprimanded by his teacher for failure to bring a written excuse from his parents for a school absence. It was brought out that Ryan knew nothing of the Young boy's whereabouts.

Ryan was held without bail for a hearing next week.

Predicts Tire Price Rise

WILLIAM O'NEIL.

10,000,000 Cyclists Face Tax in Britain

LONDON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Great Britain is considering a license tax for her 10,000,000 cyclists—but an obsolete law requiring a man with a red flag to walk in front of the bicycle definitely has been dropped.

The tax proposal calls for a fee of $1.25, the price including the cost of a bolt-on registration. Estimated revenue would be about $12,500,000.

Other suggestions considered in the anti-accident campaign were compulsory insurance, red rear lights instead of reflectors and making "careless driving" a punishable offense.

Harassed cyclists asked about the man-with-a-red-flag law, no longer enforced but still in existence. They may rest assured, officials said, the law will be forgotten completely.

RISE IN TIRE PRICES IS SEEN BY EXECUTIVE

Dutch and English Producers Co-operating To Hike Rubber Costs.

Mounting costs of rubber will send prices up on automboile tires within a few weeks, according to William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Company, who is in Atlanta attending salesmen and dealer conferences for the southeastern states.

Salesmen of the company gathered with O'Neil yesterday at the Henry Grady hotel and today approximately 200 dealers from the Carolinas, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and Florida will meet with O'Neil and other officials of the company.

"Prices on rubber imports have risen sharply in recent months," O'Neil said. "So far, the increased costs have not been passed on to the tire customer. The Dutch and the English have co-operated in a plan whereby this country will have to pay stiffer prices for raw rubber; much as we have scaled prices upward on some of our exported raw materials. Rubber that once cost about 12 cents a pound now costs about 22 cents a pound. There is nothing we can do about it as the Dutch and the English control the market."

The average American who unwisely uses a tire until it is fit only for an ash heap, should for his own safety discard tires when they have only about 5,000 miles of life left in them, O'Neil said.

"Anyone who drives a car at 60 miles or so an hour when the front tires are wearing down to their last tread is inviting sudden death," he added.

100 TALMADGE AIDES LOSE CAPITOL POSTS

terminated the tenure of Captain A. L. Henson as director of the veterans' service office following submission to him of charges that Henson, while a special delinquent tax collector, had failed to turn in collections he had made. Henson later denied the charge. Governor Rivers said he was transmitting it to the general assembly.

The Governor announced the appointment of Sam Askew, veteran chief clerk in the office, as acting director. He said he hoped to announce the new director within a few days.

Governor Rivers also announced during the day that he had selected Captain Paul Caswell, of Hinesville, as assistant adjutant general and instructed him to report to Adjutant General Jack Stoddard. Captain Caswell is a member-elect of the general assembly from Liberty county but has not taken his oath of office. A special election will be called to fill the vacancy.

The dismissal of the Talmadge appointees came suddenly. Former Chairman Carreker has been seriously ill for more than a month but he had informed the Governor that his resignation was ready whenever Governor Rivers wanted it. Yesterday the Governor sent a representative to Mr. Carreker's residence to discuss the resignation. Carreker dictated it promptly.

"It has never been my intention to embarrass the new administration," Carreker said. "I am only sorry that my condition prevents me from personally delivering my resignation to Mr. Rivers. I am one of those who fought and lost and I am willing to abide by the result. I have high hopes for the success of the new administration."

With the resignation in his hands, Governor Rivers telephoned Judge Jones and tendered him the post.

"Judge Jones is an able lawyer," the Governor said. "He served for 16 years as a judge of the superior court and is well qualified to handle the office."

Called "Happy Move."

The Governor said he believed that th appointment of Judges Jones was the "happiest" he will make in his administration.

"I know of no man who could honor my administration more than Judge Jones," he said.

Comptroller General Harrison and Judge I. H. Sutton, of the court of appeals, who succeeded Judge Jones on the superior court years ago, were present when Judge Jones took the oath of his new office.

McWhorter's appointment was determined on some time ago but he could not be appointed until the Rivers administration obtained control of the revenue commission.

The nomination of Crowe was sent to the senate by Governor Talmadge but it was returned to Governor Rivers without any action being taken on it. Governor Rivers is expected to ask the confirmation of his successor when the senate meets January 25 to begin its regular session.

Crowe's division likewise is filled with Talmadge appointees although it contains several who vigorously opposed Talmadge and supported Governor Rivers.

The removal of Henson, a strong Talmadge follower, was a foregone conclusion but he was expected to stay until Rivers determined on his successor.

Rivers said he acted on a report of Comptroller General Harrison that Henson, prior to appointment as service officer, obtained the money while collecting delinquent taxes in Fulton county.

The Governor appointed Sam Askew, veteran employe of the service office, as temporary head of the agency.

Henson Collections Set Out.

Harrison's letter to Rivers contained an affidavit of Jess Rockmore, director of the delinquent tax division of the revenue commission, setting forth the names of firms, and amounts he said were collected by Henson totaling $849.50.

"With reference to the above," the affidavit said, "will say that our deputy on calling on these concerns for delinquent occupation tax reported they produced receipts, cancelled checks or convinced him that they had receipts and cancelled checks signed by A. L. Henson or his representative showing that they had collected said tax from them."

Rivers said:

"I am not the adjudicator of the facts in this case. When the comptroller general transmits to me a report that a shortage exists, I feel it is my duty to remove Mr. Henson."

The Governor added he had prepared a special message transmitting the comptroller general's report to the legislature, but when the message was completed the legislature had adjourned.

Regarding the Askew appointment Rivers said "it is just a stop-gap until the first of next week."

"I had in mind being able to make this appointment earlier," Rivers continued, "but there was some delay in getting together with the Legion and other service organizations."

Henson Issues Denial.

Henson later issued a vigorous denial of the charges set forth in the affidavit.

Henson's statement follows:

"I shall ask Mr. Harrison to allow me to inspect his records and check his sources of information.

"I was special tax agent some four years ago and Mr. Harrison assigned me one man. Barring errors I am sure all of us made full report.

"Of course I was surprised to have the press advise me as to Mr. Harrison's special report to the Governor. I hope they will give me an opportunity to ascertain the facts about the matter.

"I certainly deny any knowledge of shortage and I am sure that if there had been very much wrong with my accounts Mr. Harrison would have brought it to the Governor four years ago.

"Mr. Harrison has always been my friend and so has Mr. Rockmore, and I feel that they would have 'stepped on' anybody on account of shortages regardless of friendship. Neither of them have mentioned it to me."

Governor Rivers said he would transmit the Harrison report to the general assembly without comment.

Meanwhile the legislature received the Governor's report on the audit of the books of former Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder. No action was taken in either house as the assembly is in its organization meeting and cannot take up matters for final action. However in the senate, Senator Paul Lindsay moved to have each member furnished with a copy of the audit in which State Auditor Tom Wisdom reported that more than $6,000 in funds collected by Linder are missing.

Linder Issues Statement.

The former commissioner issued a statement on the audit which brought an immediate rejoinder from Assistant Attorney General B. D. Murphy with whom he said he consulted on a $2,000 lease deal which is included in the missing funds.

The Linder statement follows:

"In regard to the $4,127.28, I don't know anything about it. If any checks have been misapplied as Mr. Wisdom states, he ought to say by whom the checks were indorsed, the banks they were on and the amount of each. He doesn't do this. We had a system in the department whereby checks were indorsed 'for deposit' only, just to prevent any such thing as Mr. Wisdom charges.

"About the $2,000 on the market building lease. I leased the second floor of the big market building in Atlanta to a Mr. Thompson for $2,000 a year, to be used as a retail store. Mr. Thompson put up $2,000 with me in escrow. If I got the building equipped with the necessary furniture by April 1, 1936, the $2,000 was to go for the first year's rent. If I did not get it ready by that time, Mr. Thompson was to get the $2,000 back.

Lease Returned.

"I failed to get it ready by the specified time and L. T. Snyder came to me with the lease Mr. Thompson and I had signed, with a transfer from Thompson to Snyder. I refused to ratify the transfer and Snyder presented an order from Thompson for the $2,000 refund, which I honored and took Snyder's receipt.

"At the time of this transaction I consulted the state law department and was advised that I had the authority to make the refund, and this I did on this advice. The state auditor knows this, knew of the advice at the time, yet did not bring out that fact in his report to the Governor."

Murphy Replies.

Discussing the matter, Murphy, who is retiring from the law department, said:

"I recall Mr. Linder came to me some time last spring and told me that he had leased a building on the Farmers' Market under a contract which required him to make certain improvements and give the lessee possession on April 1. He stated that he had been unable to comply with the contract, for lack of funds, and could not give possession as required. He stated that the lessee had deposited the rent for the first year in escrow and that he desired to know whether he would be authorized to release the deposit to the lessee. I inquired whether the deposit had been paid into the state treasury. Mr. Linder advised me that it had not been paid into the state treasury and had not been paid over as rent for the building, but deposited in escrow to be applied on the rent when possession was given under the contract. I advised Mr. Linder that in these circumstances he was authorized to return the deposit, and that in my opinion he would not be authorized to retain the money when he had not complied with the contract and could not comply with it. Mr. Linder did not advise me as to the property involved or the name of the lessee.

"I had never heard of Mr. Snider having any connection with the matter. Mr. Linder stated the case hypothetically, and the advice given him was based upon the facts as stated."

Physician in Atlanta Cited for 'Papaya' Cure

MELBOURNE, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP)—County Commissioner John B. Rodes prescribes papaya, tropical fruit, as a sure cure for drunkenness and a wonderful pickup for the morning after.

"I know a physician in Atlanta," he said, "who uses part of the fruit to make pills and I am told they are a sure cure for drunkenness by those who use them.

"The fruit is cut and allowed to 'bleed,' forming a sort of wax. This is then rolled up into pill-shaped forms and used with good effect to eliminate hangovers."

Police Study 'Three E's' Under Kreml To Save Lives

Back to school yesterday went 52 members of the Atlanta police department, some of whom are shown as Lieutenant Frank Kreml, nationally-known traffic expert, began teaching classes in traffic. Not the three R's, but the three E's—enforcement, education and engineering—are the pillars supporting the structure of safety, Lieutenant Kreml declared. The classes will be held for ten days at the Atlanta Opportunity School.

JOHN F. BRADLEY, 67, PASSES AT HOSPITAL

Railway Mail Division Superintendent Here Was 33rd Degree Mason.

John F. Bradley, division superintendent of the Railway Mail Service here and well known in Masonic circles, died yesterday afternoon at a private hospital, at the age of 67.

Mr. Bradley, who lived at 129 West Cambridge avenue, College Park, had been division superintendent since March, 1934, when he succeeded Walter H. Riddell, who retired.

He was a native of Cartersville, and came to Atlanta as a young man. in 1898 he took the civil service examination, and subsequently served as a substitute until October, 1900, working on every line out of Atlanta.

In 1900 he was appointed to the Atlanta-New Orleans run, and in March, 1901, was transferred to the Nashville-Atlanta run. In October, 1914, he was transferred to the office of the superintendent here.

He was promoted to assistant division superintendent in April, 1918, and then succeeded Mr. Riddell in 1934.

He was active in the Railway Mail Association, holding certificate of membership No. 940. He served as secretary of the association for five years. He was also active in the Mutual Benefit Association, serving from 1910 to 1917 as national president.

At the Detroit convention in 1917, he declined renomination. He was a 33rd degree Mason and a long-time member of College Park Methodist church.

Surviving are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. W. W. Brewton, and Mrs. John Routso; a brother, N. A. Bradley, of Cartersville, and three grandchildren. Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

POLICE CLASSES OPENED BY KREML

Enforcement, Engineering and Education Stressed for Traffic Safety.

Not the "three R's," but the "three E's"—enforcement, education and engineering—are the pillars supporting the structure of traffic safety, Lieutenant Frank Kreml, nationally-known traffic expert, pointed out yesterday as he began teaching classes comprising members of the Atlanta police department.

And holding up the pillars is the important foundation of records, complete and accurate, reports of every accident, he said, with a major factor the determination of violations committed, so that evidence may be obtained which will stand up in court.

Lieutenant Kreml, who recently completed a traffic course to police of Miami, will teach 52 members of the police department daily, except Sunday, for 10 days. Of this number taking the course, 26 will be selected for the accident prevention detail, aimed at cutting down the number of traffic fatalities in this city.

The classes are being held at the Atlanta Opportunity school, Spring and Baker streets. Lieutenant Kreml emphasized that enforcement is the strongest, most important pillar. But it must be enforcement that results in convictions, he added. The first class lesson consisted mainly of statistics relative to the size of the traffic problem in this country today.

HAMPTON SEATED AFTER CONTEST

Fannin County Republican Voted Place Contested by Allen.

Georgia's almost unanimously Democratic house of representatives voted without dissent yesterday to seat a Republican whose place was contested by a Democrat.

Without debate or ceremony, the house adopted a committee report recommending that R. T. Hampton, Faning county Republican, be allowed to retain the place from which Democrat Glenn Allen attempted to oust him.

The committee made no comment on the evidence which came before it, but Chairman Theo W. Coleman, of Lowndes county, said the committee's report was "justice without regard to political parties."

In bringing the contest, Allen alleged that some of those voting for Hampton last November in the general election were improperly qualified. Hampton replied that some of the Democratic voters likewise were improperly qualified, and that if all contested votes on both sides were thrown from the box, he still would have been elected.

NEW PENAL BUILDINGS ADVOCATED BY BATES

U. S. Prisons Overcrowded, He Says; 3,120 Confined in Atlanta Institution.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Sanford Bates, director of federal prisons reported to Attorney General Cummings today that "grievously overcrowded" government penal institutions are operated under conditions found in "no other civilized nation."

"The most populous prison in Great Britain houses less than 1,000 men," Bates said. But in this country on December 25, there were 3,120 federal prisoners confined in Atlanta penitentiary; 2,972 in Leavenworth main prison and 1,329 in Northeastern.

"We cannot dismiss our responsibility for this condition with the statement that money must be devoted to other more pleasant purposes before we can afford the building of prisons," Bates said.

"There is danger that Americans are becoming too tolerant of the grievously overcrowded prison conditions."

A December tabulation showed 49,480 persons under some sort of penal supervision on Christmas Day, an increase of 5,730 over the previous year. Of these, 21,776 were confined in prisons, reformatories, hospitals or camps and the remainder were out on parole.

The population of federal penal institutions increased during calendar year 1936 as follows; Penitentiaries 221, reformatories 40, prison camps 62, Springfield hospital 112, federal ails 29, national training school for boys 61. The number of persons on probation increased 4,515.

Justice officials said no breakdown was available showing what offenses the majority of prisoners had committed, but they said that of 24,502 sentences handed down in federal courts in the fiscal year 1936, approximately 12,750 were imposed for liquor law violations. Others were as follows: Immigration law violations, 2,520 narcotics 2,072, counterfeiting and forgery 1,523 and for violation of postal laws, 1,345.

Rising building costs meantime have required justice officials to scrap half or possibly two-thirds of a $2,500,000 prison building program.

Burnett, who died in February, 1934, as a result of an explosion at the Brewster plant of the corporation where he was employed as chief chemist.

The suit brought by Mrs. Burnett sought $100,000 damages and charged the company with negligence and failure to provide a safe place for her husband to work. The trial was begun before Federal Judge Akerman Wednesday.

A VITAL SAFEGUARD

It is not surprising that no part of the suggested program of governmental reorganization prepared by the committee named by the President, and submitted by him to congress, has aroused more criticism than the recommendation for changes in the duties and authority of the comptroller general.

Under the present law the comptroller general is the chief safeguard against improper spending of the money of the federal government. All vouchers from every department and agency of the government must be approved by the comptroller general before the amount called for can be expended. Under the suggested change, this safeguard would be removed and the comptroller general would become, in effect, merely an auditor who, after the money has been expended, would announce whether it had been legally or illegally paid out.

There are various loopholes through which the money of the federal government could leak out of the treasury without such a safeguard as the comptroller general's office now provides. Frequently congress itself unwittingly makes appropriations which are in direct conflict with existing laws and on which money cannot legally be paid out.

During the past four years the comptroller general's office has prevented the expenditure of many millions of dollars which could not be properly expended. Practically all of the major departments of the government have been blocked at one time or another in the effort to spend money for purposes or in ways which were illegal. As a result, Comptroller General McCarl incurred almost universal opposition in Washington.

It must not be overlooked, however, that when the office of comptroller general was created as a safeguard for the public moneys, congress took cognizance of the fact that to be efficient it should be free from political influence and, accordingly, set the term of office of the comptroller general at 15 years.

No private business could be safely conducted without a safeguard of expenses and expenditures such as is the comptroller general's office to the federal government.

It would be a serious blunder should the congress approve this recommendation of the President's committee on governmental reorganization. It would be tantamount to telling politically controlled departments that they could go ahead and spend all the money they desired, in any way, with the only penalty being that, after the money was gone and unrecoverable, they would be informed they had done something that was not right.

AN AMAZING REVELATION

The revelation by State Auditor Tom Wisdom of the diversion to other purposes by former Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder of the $50,000 appropriated by the last general assembly for a campaign to eradicate the screw worm in Georgia is another amazing chapter of the record of maladministration of this vitally important state department during the past four years.

Despite the use of this additional money above the amount appropriated by the legislature for the support of the department, Auditor Wisdom's report also reveals that the department is $69,349 in debt and that collections amounting to $6,127.18 were made but not reported to the Treasury.

The department head responsible for this deplorable conduct of public business is the same official, it will be recalled, who favored secession of Georgia from the Union simply because he did not approve of the policies of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Georgia has never had a more impressive demonstration of the necessity of putting the right kind of men into public office than the record of mismanagement in the State Department of Agriculture during the past four years.

Georgia is fortunate that in Columbus Roberts, the new commissioner, the department will be headed by a man of broad business ability, practical farming experience and earnest determination to leave no step untaken to forward the interests of agriculture in the state.

He is faced with a gigantic task in bringing order out of the chaos now existing in the department, but no man has ever been more capable of tackling the job than Commissioner Roberts.

AN IDEAL APPOINTMENT

Governor Rivers' appointment of Marion Smith as a member of the Board of Regents of the University System will be universally commended. Georgia has no finer, nor more constructive, type of citizen than this leading member of the Atlanta bar.

As a former member of the board Mr. Smith rendered outstanding and distinguished service in the interests of the University System. He has, since his graduation at the University, demonstrated in many ways his devotion to the welfare of the institution.

The cause of education in Georgia is forwarded by Governor Rivers' action in designating as his first appointment following his induction into office this able Georgian as a member of the board having control of the high educational institutions of the state.

Mr. Smith succeeds David I. Barron, of Monroe, who, although his service on the board was not long, made an enviable record for earnest and far-sighted application to the duties with which the board members are charged.

As the famous "Red" Barron of the Tech football team of past years, this fine young Georgian earned a national reputation for aggressiveness and fine sportsmanship. In the educational realm of the state, Mr. Barron has continued to exhibit a rare spirit of progressiveness and loyalty.

His service on the board was a well-earned recognition of his long and earnest efforts toward the betterment of educational conditions in Georgia. No member of the board ever worked more constructively and industriously than Mr. Barron in the service of education.

THE STRIKE TRUCE

The country will welcome the news that, through the good offices of Governor Murphy, of Michigan, a basis has been reached for negotiations between the General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers looking to a settlement of the strike which has been in progress for several weeks.

Monday night in Flint, Mich., the police sought to eject "sit-down" strikers from a Fisher Body plant, a General Motors subsidiary. There was a hard-fought battle, with riot guns and tear gas among the weapons used. Fourteen men were shot and more than a score injured in other ways. Outside, on the streets, police and strike sympathizers were in collision.

Union leaders charge that the authorities lent themselves to a premeditated scheme to start trouble. The General Motors management has contended all along that these "sit-down" strikers are trespassers.

The merits of this controversy are not the paramount consideration at this juncture. It may be held that the union is wrong in insisting on exclusive recognition for collective bargaining, or that the company is wrong in insisting that the union negotiate with local managers only.

All this is beside the point, in the light of the real issue of whether this country is capable of handling labor disputes in a sensible, just and civilized fashion.

That is what the public is and ought to be mainly interested in.

The law provides a method for determining whether a union represents a majority of employes in a plant. If General Motors and the Automobile Workers of America can be persuaded to accept the result of elections held under the Wagner act, a major difficulty will have been removed.

The country has been stirred by the menace of an ever-widening strike, shutting down one of the most important industries in the land, and thereby halting the processes of recovery.

The truce now in effect is comforting reassurance that a satisfactory basis for the settlement of this threatening strike will be reached at the conferences to begin next week.

Reichswehr or Red Army?

Any tolerably far-sighted observer can see now that the upshot of these years of jockeying for position in the international arena will be a contest of strength eventually between the armed forces of the two great totalitarian states, Germany and the Soviets. There may be allies on either side, but these two will be the main contenders, perhaps for the mastery of the world. Has Russia any chance of beating off a German attack? Has Germany got the required equipment to keep up a war of aggression, foodstuffs, raw materials, etc? At the present moment, surely not.

If it were a straight fight between Moscow and Berlin, as Hitler wants it, the Soviets would most likely be beaten. I doubt if the regime can count on the undivided support of the peasants in a long drawn-out armed conflict. I also doubt the efficacy of the Russian war-material as well as the ability of the young classes of Red officers. But then, of course, that war could never be isolated to these two states. Virtually every state in Europe will come in. In the end, I predict both the Nazi and the Bolshevik dictatorship will break down. How much of Europe will remain standing, I cannot say, perhaps a village here and there.

The Identity of The Russians in Spain.

It is said that about 18 or 20,000 Russians are fighting on the Loyalist side in Spain. When I heard this for the first time, I wondered how they got there. Surely not by airplane or not even by boat. The secret is out: they are Russian residents of Paris, most of them emigres, that is to say former Czarists. They belong to an organization known as the home-goers, or the goers-back. That is, they had made application to the Soviet government to return home.

Being Russian patriots above everything else, they felt that in the black days that their fatherland is apt to face in the future, they wanted to be there. Instead of letting them come home, the Soviet authorities directed them to go and fight in Spain. I should not think they are very happy about that.

Dr. Schacht's Theory.

Italy has, with the conquest of Ethiopia, been taken out of the ranks of the have-nots and put in the ranks of the satisfied nations. The turn is now to Germany, says Dr. Schacht, the director of the Reichsbank. So long as Germany has no colonies and no access to raw materials, she will remain a cause of unrest in the world, he added. Within the next year or so, a beginning will be made to restore some of her old colonies to the Reich. But will she disarm them, send her millions of men engaged in war industry home and play the game of Democratic international co-operation?

Of course not. For that would mean the collapse of her national economy. Therefore, after the colonies, Germany will ask and cajole and intimidate for something else—until the day when she asks too much, when she won't ask anything, but start to take it.

Good Morning.

THE HOME.

State Secretary H. W. Rhorer, of the Y. M. C. A., kindly sends me an outline of study proposed for the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs in the high schools of Georgia, February 8-April 2, under the general title, "Youth and the Home," the basis of study being the Bible's teachings with reference to the happy home. The several topics for study include, "The Financial Partnership," "Health," "Co-operation versus Friction," "Places to Go and Things to Do," "The Old versus the New," "Co-operation With the School," and "Religion in the Home." A splendid booklet is provided with a chapter devoted to each of the above topics. There are many Scripture references and quotations throughout the booklet. Mr. Rhorer states that last year they enrolled 9,200 high school boys and girls in this Bible study course, and they are asking for at least 10,000 young Georgians in the classes this year. I hope they will have many times more. It is an altogether helpful course of study and will greatly enrich the life of our state.

Governor Rivers made an impassioned appeal to the people of Georgia in his inaugural address to consider the home as the basis of all worthwhile civilization. I listened to his address while driving along from Atlanta to Forsyth. As he was speaking so earnestly and helpfully about the importance of the home, I was listening and praying—praying that we may take to heart these words of wisdom and seek in every possible way to make our homes the centers of affection and reverence.

In Greenland when one knocks at the door of a neighbor, he says, "Is this the home of God?" If the answer is "yes" the neighbor opens the door and enters. My prayer is that the day may be near when that question will receive an affirmative answer whenever and wherever asked in Georgia. Homes that enthrone God—homes where He holds the keys to every heart—will be homes of power, homes of love, homes of light.

I read a statement in a magazine the other day that frightens me. The particular sentence to which I refer was this, "The difficulty is great, for the home merely provides a place for sleep and some of our meals, but no longer is the center for play and worship." I do not accept that as representative of all homes, but I fear it is altogether too true of many of them. May we join with Arthur Guiterman in this great prayer:

"Bless the four corners of this house, and be the lintel blest; and bless the hearth and bless each place of rest. And bless the roof-tree overhead, and every sturdy wall. The peace of man, the peace of God, the peace of love on all."

Forced to Reign.

Pertinax Publius Helvius was proclaimed emperor of Rome in 192 A. D. against his will! Too old (66), he thought, to be ruler of the world, the consul, who had been a charcoal peddler in his early life, opposed his election and was forced to take his throne by the imperial guard at sword's point. His reign lasted less than three months, until he was stabbed to death—by a charcoal peddler!

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

SILENT WORKER WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The invincible man in the auto strike assembly line seems to be none other than President Roosevelt himself. If he has not been boring a quiet hole or two in the chassis of Messrs. Lewis and Sloan, it must have been a federal ghost acting for him. His sit-down posture has belied hints that he has been active, but some of the recent strike news bears a familiar presidential touch.

TIPS For instance, the flat-glass workers indicated a few days ago that they were ready for a settlement. It appeared to many an observer around here that they had toned down their demands considerably. At the same time, Mr. John Lewis' right arm, which goes by the name of Philip Murray, began moving as if to take hold of that glass situation and clean it up peacefully forthwith.

The official inside story around labor headquarters was that Mr. Lewis wanted the glass strike stopped because it was hurting Ford and Chrysler, whereas he wanted to injure their competitor, General Motors.

It is more than a substantial guess, however, that Mr. Lewis was informed he had better not let his strike become general in the automobile industry, or else the federal government would have to step in. As long as the strike affected General Motors, all the New Dealers seemed to be content to let Michigan's Governor Murphy handle it. Somehow they cannot get excited about the sufferings of the du Ponts. That is a state matter. But the broader aspect of the flat-glass strike was something else again.

If Mr. Lewis did not get this information from an unimpeachable authority about two blocks south of his headquarters here, it was nevertheless very, very authentic.

SOCIETY Nothing ever came out about the one-hour visit of Myron Taylor to the presidential office. It was described as purely a social call, but skeptics are inclined to doubt that the President and the chairman of United States Steel have enough in common socially to talk for an hour. At least, not without discussing the one subject uppermost in their minds, namely, the Lewis drive to organize steel, as well as motors.

Whereas Mr. Roosevelt knows the du Ponts only by hearsay from his son, Mr. Taylor is said to be their best financial friend. If Mr. Roosevelt wanted to send them a message, he could find no one with a better knowledge of the road to Garcia.

In more than one well-informed quarter it is accepted as a fact that Mr. Taylor's message contained advice against a prolonged dispute. It is said to have been an important development leading up to the Murphy peace conference of employers and employes.

BACKGROUND No weak spots have been outwardly noticeable in the morale around C. I. O. headquarters here, but, on the inside of labor circles close to Lewis, there has been a feeling since early this week that a settlement of the General Motors dispute was in order.

Mr. Lewis seemed to his friends to be sure of congressional help and sure of his leaders, but not entirely sure of everything.

Some impartial observers out on the scene simultaneously reached the conclusion that the well-organized publicity campaign of the employers about a large number of their men wanting to work was not all propaganda.

Also, many a devoted labor authority began to wonder about the possibility of Messrs. Lewis and Green getting so completely involved on opposite sides of the controversy as to set them both back permanently.

NEW CABINETEERS Labor Secretary Perkins has been receiving exclusive mention in the press for that new cabinet job as head of the Department of Social Service. The best bet for it, however, is Chairman John Winant, of the Social Security Board. Around the White House he is just about tops in that line.

The other job, as head of the new Department of Public Works, may or may not go to Harry Hopkins, the WPA administrator. They say he will be offered the post, or something equal to it, but may not accept.

Of one thing you may be sure. Mr. Roosevelt will not let Hopkins go out as Professor Tugwell did. If Hopkins goes, it will be because he insists.

Note—Joseph Kennedy, the able ex-chairman of SEC, is being pushed to succeed Commerce Secretary Roper. He has as strong inside support as it is possible to get in the New Deal outside the White House.

REORGANIZATION The President's congressional arrangers expected a critical reaction to his reorganization plan, but not quite as bad as it received. The realization that the best part of it will not be passed by congress is said to have reached even the top. Consequently, you may shortly see a change of strategy in the handling of it.

A move may be made in congress to authorize the President to carry out a part of it by executive order. If this is done, it will be only the undisputed part, creating the two new federal departments, and perhaps a few other minor things.

1937— A Preview.

There is little prospect of European war during 1937, according to prophecy by that strange organization, the Rosicrucian Brotherhood. Have just received a book of prophecies published by that organization, annually. Suppose they have as good, or perhaps better—who knows—ability to peer into the future as any of us.

So, you may be interested in a few excerpts from this preview of the year to come.

And, as explanation for some items, it is stated the pamphlet was written during the closing weeks of last August. In light of this, some of the prophecies concerning the national election in November are as wide of the mark as were some of the highly publicized national polls.

Mussolini Is "Fearful."

It is startling to read "Mussolini is fearful." Yet, says the prophesy:

"Despite the statements of newspapers, political schemers, and alarmists, the Spirit of Warfare is badly weakened and is in declining power in most—if not all—of the European and Asiatic countries, and especially in those whose present leaders or representatives are the most bombastic in their threatening speeches and military activities.

"It is evident from a careful analysis of the world charts that most of the leaders of European countries are more fearful of war than are the citizens, although propaganda would have us believe otherwise.

"Premier Mussolini is fearful each night that he may awaken in the morning and find that one of his neighboring countries has accepted his challenge of superior military strength. Hitler feels precisely the same way and so do the lords of Russia and Japan; while the rulers or representatives of England, France, Belgium, Austria and the Balkan States fear that over night they may become involved in one or more wars through the wretched diplomatic agreements they have foolishly or hopefully made.

"Back of the grandiose poses and bravado of most of Europe's dictators and potentates is an attitude of pretentious bluffing."

And Concerning Der Fuehrer.

If you want a glimpse of what is facing Mr. Hitler, the Rosicrucians say:

"What the people of Germany desire more than anything else in this world is Peace, and good father Hitler knows this. He has won the respect (no longer fear) of his children through his secret and oft repeated assurances to them that he will not plunge them into war. Yet he tells the world that his ideas and ideals shall prevail. He has not yet learned that his diabolical attacks on all established religions, and his disgraceful persecution of the Jews, will bring the Karmic result of war upon him and his people. The charted lines of Germany already point out this coming war, and the German populace itself will demand a return of certain former tolerances, though Mr. Hitler may not live to witness his humiliation in this manner."

Neutral Trend Very Definite.

"The peaceful, neutral trend of the U. S. A. is very definite throughout 1937 so far as international affairs are concerned. Would that it prove so in regard to domestic matters and local civil strifes!"

That last sentence is alarming, isn't it? Well, read this:

"With the re-election of Franklin Delano Roosevelt the United States will definitely adopt a form of dictatorship. . . .

"Thus will the Cosmic urges and processes bring the inevitable changes in the American scheme of government. In similar manner have other nations modified their traditional forms of government."

"1937 will be dotted from coast to coast with numerous strikes, protests, battles, riots and mysterious fires and dynamiting. Ships, harbors, bridges, railroad tracks and terminals, factories, warehouses and large dairies should be carefully guarded and protected. Large unfinished constructional contracts should be heavily insured."

As for Great Britain:

"Great Britain is moving headlong toward a form of "Fascist" rule that will have the support of a larger number of the intelligent Britons than she now publicly acknowledges, though in secret conferences she is trying to avoid the inevitable."

And here is a hot forecast! Remember they were talking about the then King Edward.

Trying year? I'll say.

From The Constitution of Tuesday, January 16, 1912:

"Chicago, January 15.—(Special)—Robert C. Fargason, 22 years old, who for the past two weeks has been living at the Hotel Astor under the name of J. W. Wade and because of his large expenditures of money became known as "The Millionaire Kid" to the many chorus girls who live at the hostelry, was arrested tonight and confessed that he is wanted in Atlanta for stealing an express package from the Southern Express Company containing $7,000."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From The Constitution of Sunday, January 16, 1887:

"Possibly the most brilliant society event of the season was the reception of Major and Mrs. Livingston Mims Thursday evening, at their beautiful home on Peachtree street. Wurm's orchestra discoursed music. During the evening the young people spent most of the time in the conservatory."

Plant Experimenter.

Gregor Johann Mendel died in 1884, aged 62, in a monastery, years before anyone realized that he had left a notable contribution to natural knowledge. Within the monastery, by laborious experimentation with plants, he discovered that the hereditary constitution of a living organism is determined by a group of units which have a permanent nature and can pass through parent to offspring unchanged for many generations. He had been found to be unfitted to be a parish priest, because he could not bear the sight of human suffering!

FAIR ENOUGH

Self-Esteem Of Young Fighters

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—One of the hardships of writing as a career is that the new writer, unlike the new prizefighter, always feels bound to start with an unknown name, usually his own, although a few invent pen names which nevertheless are new and possess no prestige at the beginning. Pugilists have neither excessive modesty nor ethical compunction in this matter. On the contrary they have magnificent self-esteem and do not doubt that they do honor to the proud names which they adopt. It must be said, too, that this confidence often has been justified by practical performance. This leads me to believe that they may also have been inspired by the glory of the originals and to wonder whether a new poet toiling under the name of Smith might do better as Young Homer.

Jim Corbett, the original, was followed by a total stranger, a featherweight, calling himself Young Corbett, while Jim was still current and engaged in elevating a corner of the drama. Young Corbett, be it admitted, brought no professional discredit to the proud name of Corbett for he knocked out Terry McGovern, a feat comparable, pound for pound, with "Gentleman Jim's" dispatch of John L. Sullivan.

Young Corbett Less Faithful

On the social side of things, Young Corbett was less faithful, to his model and it may be that Jim sometimes permitted himself a secret wish that his namesake had used his own name in private life. Young Corbett, in turn, was succeeded by a welterweight within the last few years who solved an awkward problem rather neatly by calling himself not young Corbett but Young Corbett II. I believe he, too, won the championship of his class, adding luster to the name but I have no data on his social life and no idea whether he meant his private conduct as a tribute to Jim Corbett or Young Corbett the first.

Jack Dempsey, "the old nonpareil," a middleweight, who sleeps in a lonely grave out west, of which a poet wrote a sad description some years ago, lost nothing by the fact that William Harrison Dempsey called himself Jack. First, however, Barney Dempsey, a brother of William Harrison, undertook to emulate the greatness of the Nonpareil and, finding himself unworthy, retired in favor of the man who is now one of the leading citizens of the United States.

2 Sharkeys Since Tom

There have been two Sharkeys since Tom, both calling themselves Jack however, which may have been a touch of modesty on their part indicating that they hoped to resemble but did not expect to equal him. The first Jack Sharkey, an Italian bantamweight, barely failed to win the championship and, from the standpoint of professional merit, was much more worthy than the next one, who did win the heavyweight title. The bantamweight Jack Sharkey fought with great abandon, made $300,000, disposed of it with equal abandon and had vanished by the time Joseof Paul Cuckoschay, the heavyweight, of Lithuanian descent, adopted the surname of the Irish sailor. Nevertheless, the heavyweight Jack Sharkey did win the heavyweight championship, whatever his virtue as a fighter and the name appeared for the first time in the list of titleholders, for the old original, in a time of harder competition, never quite got up there.

We had a middleweight once who called himself Italian Joe Gans but this seems to have been an unfortunate selection on his part for he was not the type in any sense.

I do not know whether young writers would be inspired by great names but in the gymnasiums where young fighters train, there are always new Dempseys and Leonards and I wonder if any students in the classroom ever sign their essays boldly "by Irish Anatole France" or "by Young Katharine Bush," maybe in the latter case, the original Katharine Bush would miss the compliment entirely for there would be in that just the faintest suggestion of a marked difference in age. A certain tribute might be honestly intended and yet I cannot imagine Miss Bush entirely pleased to be forced into the status of old Katharine Bush even through the admiration of an aspirant, however sincere.

Hopelessly Overmatched

Then, too, with nightlife what it is nowadays and with new authors, at the first hint of success, spending their evenings in saloons in order to be presented as celebrities by the master of ceremonies, a lady of established reputation and modest behavior might be embarrassed to have it said that an upstart of the same name had thrown a bottle through a mirror the other night. If a writer named were pinched for fighting in a New York pub fairness would demand a footnote explaining that Ernest Hemingway was in Key West fishing and that the prisoner was Kid Hemingway, a preliminary writer, engaged on greeting cards.

But I insist on my original thought that if fighters find it helpful and a shortcut to fame to adopt great names, young authors may have overlooked a golden chance in the library. Of course it might make them self-conscious. I was once invited to ghost some copy under the name of Maurice Maeterlinck and, unlike Young Corbett and Young Corbett II, felt hopelessly overmatched.

Talmudic Tales

BY DAVID MORANTZ.

No. 543.

(Based upon the legends and philosophy found in the Talmud, which work contains the civic and canonical laws and traditions of the Jewish people, dating back as far as 3,000 years.)

QUESTIONS I'VE BEEN ASKED.

Is it true that Jews consider it a sin to step upon bread crumbs on the floor? The Jewish law forbids the disrespectful use of bread or of any other article of food.

The crumbs left on the tablecloth following the meal must not be thrown upon the floor, where they may be stepped upon but should be gathered and given to the fowls or birds.

It is not permitted to use a piece of bread to support a dish filled with food.

What is the meaning of Bar Mitzvah? "Son of the Commandment," and refers to a Jewish boy who has reached the age of 13, at which time he becomes a full-fledged member of the Jewish community, obliged to follow the customs and institutions of Judaism. From this day on, he is held responsible for his actions."

Due to the extensive interest in Talmudic Tales, 128 of the legends and over 500 Pearls of Wisdom have been collected in an attractive book of 195 pages, handsomely bound in grained blue vellum cloth, with gold-stamped title. Autographed by author. Suitable for gifts or prizes. Price $1.50 post paid. Address orders to "Talmudic Tales," care The Atlanta Constitution.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

When I returned to my boyhood home after an absence of years, I was astonished, as all people are in like circumstances, by the apparent shrinkage of the landscape. The houses were smaller, the hills lower, and the once romantic river was scarcely more than a brook.

The difference was real, but the change was not in the landscape but only in my mind's interpretation of it.

A renowned scientist said some years ago that we live in an imaginary world, for we never see things as they are but only as we think they are.

Suppose you are out walking with a person who is almost blind and almost deaf. You hear distinct music and see a flock of sparrows on the ground, but he, not being aware of his afflictions, insists that you are imagining things. There is no sound, he says, and there are no birds in sight.

Don't be impatient with him, for your superiority is relative and slight. There are innumerable sounds above and below the range that is audible to you, and there are countless things too small for your eyes to discern.

You dip water from a brook and remark how clear it is. You observe the bark of a tree and think it smooth. Yet a powerful microscope shows that each drop of water is swarming with animal life in a jungle of vegetation, and reveals mountains and valleys on the smoothest bark.

If you could hear all sounds that fill the air, you would be driven frantic by the bedlam of shrieks and roars of which you are now mercifully unaware.

In a word, we all are deaf and blind in some degree, and no two of us see or hear precisely the same thing, for our imperfect senses have different degrees of efficiency.

Add the fact that all of us have different minds, which vary in their ability to interpret what the senses report, and you perceive that each of us lives in an imaginary world that is peculiar to himself.

Is it any wonder that we misunderstand one another? The wonder is that we ever agree about anything.

Well, the point is that one should learn to be tolerant and charitable. It isn't a mark of intelligence to be cross with the blind because they don't see what you see.

Love, DAD.

Hollywood Today

BY SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15.—Bigger and better pictures will see the light of screen appreciation during the coming year—if one can believe the optimistic statements and plans emanating from Hollywood's major studios.

S. J. Briskin, vice president in charge of R. K. O.-Radio productions, believes that:

"A greater output of Class A features with spectacle value, sharp action and music emphasized, will mark motion picture productions in 1937. The day is past when two or three big pictures and two or three big stars can carry a 50-film program. The success of 'The Informer' last year definitely established that new film fans can be lured to the theater by powerful pictures with an unusual theme.

"New faces are extremely important to the picture industry today. The signing of Lily Pons proves the point. During the filming of her second picture, 'That Girl From Paris,' Miss Pons received more than 5,000 letters from men and women who declared they had not been accustomed to going to motion pictures until they saw her debut in films last year."

According to Samuel Goldwyn, the trend of 1937 is to keep away from trends. "Trends tend to destroy entertainment, not to furnish it. For instance, everyone in Hollywood is predicting that light entertainment and comedy is the present 'trend;' that audiences will only want to see 'My Man Godfreys' and 'Libeled Ladies.' In other words, Hollywood is trying to foretell what audiences will like in wholesale blocks.

"The audiences do not know what they want to see. They want to see outstanding entertainment, no matter what year it is. If that entertainment is outstanding comedy, they will flock to the theaters. But if that entertainment is outstanding drama or superb tragedy, they will flock just the same.

"I shall make 'Stella Dallas,' a story of great mother-love. Assuming that it will be an outstanding picture does not mean that all other pictures should be mother-love pictures.

"Ever since I have been a producer I have seen cheap imitations follow outstanding pictures. They blame it on a 'trend.' Rather it is lack of originality or of the knowledge that audiences always want something new, not carbon copies."

"The coming year will witness three important developments," he told me. "In the first place, I expect there will be many historical stories with the scope of the recently completed 'Lloyds of London,' and the newly begun 'In the Last Slaver' at Twentieth Century-Fox.

"Secondly, I see an increasing interest in musical pictures. Twentieth Century-Fox alone is scheduling one a month, beginning with the Irving Berlin musical, 'On the Avenue,' now in production, and to include such stories as the Walter Winchell-Ben Bernie film, 'Wake Up and Live,' 'Sally, Irene and Mary,' and 'Alexander's Ragtime Band,' the latter in itself a sweeping cavalcade of swing music from its inception to the present."

"The public is in the mood for 'different' pictures," states Paramount's producer-director, Frank Lloyd. "The success of 'Winterset,' 'Rembrandt,' 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie,' 'Fury' and other pictures that keep off the beaten path indicates public acceptance of 'different' vehicles. I am trying to do much the same thing with 'Maid of Salem,' in which Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray are involved in a romance against a background of puritanical superstition.

"Outdoor adventure stories came to the fore in the last year, and will continue to be successful. We are making 'Souls at Sea,' with Gary Cooper and George Raft,' and the next production on my own schedule is Gilbert Gabriel's adventure story, 'I, James Lewis.' The trend is toward better pictures, not particular kinds of pictures."

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

So many of the girls are wearing the quaint leg-o-mutton sleeves that one would not be astonished if bustles are not far behind, and no pun intended.

Every spring I receive a number of inquiries about the correct way to take sulphur and molasses to clear the system or purify the blood or something. These inquiries are not nearly so frequent as they were 20 years ago, but they still come in, so it seems evident that the good old spring medicine is not entirely obsolete.

For years it has been my custom to answer these inquiries as unequivocally as possible. First I tell 'em a mixture of equal quantities of flowers of sulphur and molasses—that is, a teaspoonful of the sulphur for every teaspoonful of molasses, or cupful for cupful if you wish to mix up a batch—is right. And the usual dose of this is a teaspoonful once or twice a day—say night and morning. Then I mention that molasses is a mild laxative and so is sulphur, but that there is no other known therapeutic or remedial effect. This, I suppose, is rather unsatisfactory, but it is the best I can do.

The latest reports from the laboratories, however, may encourage the old timers who have put faith in sulphur and molasses all these years. It is now suggested that sulphur aids in the effects of vitamin A and vitamin B, and that these vitamins can remain inactive in the body if the sulphur content falls below a certain level.

A treatment for arthritis by injections of special colloidal sulphur compounds, is gauged by chemical analysis of the finger nail parings to determine their sulphur content.

Perhaps a course of sulphur would not be a bad thing for persons who have nutritional defects in the nails—pitting, ridging, cracking, undue brittleness or thinness of the nails.

It is even suggested that the habit of biting the nails may in some instances be due to a craving for sulphur. . . .

These are more or less speculative observations. I don't know whether plain sulphur (flowers of sulphur, sublimed sulphur), as ordinarily used medicinially, will serve every purpose, or whether some hifalutin "organic" sulphur compound will be exploited as essential.

There are plenty of foods which furnish organic sulphur, such as wheat, beans, peas, egg, cheese, oatmeal, watercress, horse radish, mustard, flaxseed.

The body normally contains about 5 ounces of sulphur.

One fine thing about the old sulphur and molasses "spring tonic" is that it can never do any harm.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Tan.

What kind of machine is used to produce a sun tan? Does it injure the skin in any way to acquire a light tan from such a machine? (T. K. H.)

Answer—Exposure of the skin to ultra-violet rays from a mercury-vapor quartz lamp or a carbon arc lamp will produce the same tan the ultraviolet rays of sunlight produce. If exposure is not excessive no harm is done. Excessive exposure may cause sunburn.

Child Versus Adult.

Should a growing child of 11 years eat more than a lady of 21? (Mrs. S. J. C.)

Answer—A normal child of that age may require fully as much or even more food than the average sedentary adult. The child burns up much more in active play and requires more for building, growth and repair.

One of the counts upon which she was found guilty of heresy by the French clergy was that she didn't like to wear silk, but preferred rough, mannish attire!

OFF THE RECORD - By Ed Reed

"Whom shall I say is calling him THAT?"

SENATOR ENNIS HEADS GEORGIA FAIR GROUP; BENTON BOARD CHIEF

State Association Retained Following Dissolution of Southeastern Body.

State Senator J. H. Ennis, of Milledgeville, yesterday was elected president of the Association of Georgia Fairs.

Felix Jenkins, of Columbus, and R. L. Summerau Jr., Augusta, were elected vice presidents; E. R. Jordan, Macon, secretary and treasurer, and Mike Benton, Atlanta, chairman of the board of directors.

The Georgia association was retained as a state group following dissolution of the Association of Agricultural and Industrial Fairs of the Southeast at a convention here yesterday.

Benton said the southeastern organization was abandoned to permit the various state groups which composed it to operate separately.

The Georgia organization adopted resolutions asking the state legislature to exempt carnivals operating at agricultural and industrial fairs from "prohibitive taxes," and asking the legislature to appropriate a state fund to be divided proportionately between agricultural fairs.

The board of directors chosen to serve with Benton include Henry Odom, of Covington; Gordon Chapman, of Sandersville, and O. P. Johnson, of Americus.

The closing meeting was addressed by M. D. Mobley, assistant director of vocational education; Miss Emmie Nelson, of Athens, assistant state 4-H Club leader, and Walter Hendrix, attorney.

Other resolutions adopted included support to Governor Rivers and his administration; support to Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts, and a request for consideration by the state for a fund to be allocated for premiums for livestock exhibits, now prevailing in several other southern states.

Benton said the tax resolution was adopted because "at present the state levies a $25 tax on each show and amusement device operated by a carnival."

The association accepted an invitation of Summerau to convene in Augusta in January, 1938.

JAYCEES PLEDGE WARM SPRINGS AID

Harrison Jones, State Drive Chairman, Is Speaker at Luncheon.

Support of the drive to create a permanent endowment fund for the Warm Springs Foundation was pledged by the membership of the Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday at their weekly luncheon-meeting.

Harrison Jones, state chairman of the drive's executive committee, was principal speaker and outlined Georgia's part in the campaign. The quota for this state is $100,000. Georgia was chosen for the drive's start because Warm Springs is in the state, and Georgia is "the President's second home."

Mr. Jones praised President Roosevelt as the "man who brought back prosperity," and said, "Once Georgia reaches its quota, the other 47 states of the nation will swing into action in this effort to perpetuate the fight against infantile paralysis."

F. Dade Kelley, president of the chamber, expressed confidence every member would do his share in helping to reach the goal. He presented J. B. Crouch, retiring president, with a gold life membership card. Duncan Peek, advisory board chairman, presided.

Wholesale Breakage of Neon Signs Results in Police Capture of Pair

Breaking of more than 80 neon display signs here within the past 10 days resulted yesterday in charges of disorderly conduct, malicious mischief against two Atlanta men.

The defendants were listed as Francis McIntosh, 30, of a Memorial drive address, and D. S. Monroe, 26, of 690 Ashby street, S. W. They were held under bonds of $500 each, pending arraignment in recorder's court January 21.

According to police reports, Patrolman V. A. Howell said an automobile containing two men drove slowly by the McNeel Marble Company at 258 Peachtree street at about 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

One of the occupants, Patrolman Howell reported, propelled a stone from a sling-shot, breaking the sign of the marble firm. The car then sped away. The officer obtained the license number, which was subsequently broadcast to radio cars.

A short time later, Radio Patrolmen W. J. Smith and L. F. Preston spotted the car at Park avenue and Fair street, and took the occupants into custody.

Investigators said the breaking of the signs has cost merchants more than $1,000 in repairs. It was also stated small rocks and staples were found in the car. McIntosh said he was employed by an electrical company here.

Mrs. Mary Clara Duckworth, 34, of 980 Piedmont avenue, N. E., wife of B. F. Duckworth Jr., a clerk in the city electrician's office, died yesterday at a local hospital after undergoing an operation Saturday.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, with the Rev. Lester Rumble and the Rev. M. L. Spain officiating. Burial will be at West Point.

FRENCH DEPUTIES VOTE TO HALT VOLUNTEERS FROM JOINING SPANISH

Bill To Be Withheld Until Similar Plan Is Adopted by Other Powers.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies voted unanimously tonight—591 to 0—to give Premier Leon Blum power to halt the flow of volunteers from or through France to the Spanish civil war.

Heeding the premier's warning that the volunteer question had become one of "saving Europe from war," the deputies responded overwhelmingly to his appeal to show France's "will for peace, good will and respect for international agreements."

The vote was on the government's bill to punish French volunteers at the discretion of judges and to impose fines of 10,000 francs ($460) and prison sentences of six months or a year on persons involved in the enlistment of volunteers.

Six-Month Bill.

The bill fixed a time limit of six months. Premier Blum promised its powers would not be invoked unless other nations took like action.

The premier was expected to obtain the senate's approval of the measure early next week to be ready for immediate and effective action as soon as other powers agree on measures for controlling the volunteer tide.

Before the vote M. Blum told the chamber he needed the powers embodied in the bill as the only way to get "reciprocity" from Germany. Armed with such authority he would press demands that Germany and other interested nations impose similar bans.

The socialist premier said France was willing to accept any kind of control on movement of men and arms into Spain approved by the international non-intervention committee on any part of French territory "without raising the question of our sovereignty."

Co-operate With Britain.

M. Blum emphasized France must show her "determination to co-operate to the fullest extent with Great Britain."

The British government already has invoked a law of 1870 to prevent its subjects from joining the Spanish armies.

Suggestions from Rome that Italy and Germany planned to invite Britain and possibly France to join an anti-Communist bloc—as the price of their neutrality in Spain—were unfavorably received in Paris.

Officials declined comment, but authoritative commentators referred to the suggestion as "a trap, a transparent maneuver" to compel France to help isolate the Soviet union, with which she is in alliance.

It was pointed out that all recent official French pronouncements have shown France intends to stand by her mutual assistance pact with Russia.

ITALIAN PRESS BEGINS ANTI-RED CAMPAIGN

ROME, Jan. 15.—(AP)—With apparent government consent, the Italian press began a campaign today against Communist influence in France, presented as a bar to effective non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

Heralding the second day of Nazi-Colonel General Hermann Wilhelm Goering's conference with Premier Mussolini, newspapers charged Spanish frontier provinces in France are ruled by Communists who refuse to obey the Paris government.

Desire to Continue Aid.

Consequently, usually inspired newspapers contended, any agreement signed by France to keep out of the Spanish conflict would meet with difficulty in application—because of French Communist desire to continue aid to the Spanish Valencia government.

An official inferred government indorsement of the campaign, asserting the Italian government had reports of much Communist activity in the French provinces facing Spain.

La Tribuna commented that "news on the international situation in France cannot but worry governments which at this moment are making reply to the English memorandum on non-intervention.

"In the frontier zones, passage of arms and volunteers continues unhindered.

"How can one guarantee non-intervention in France, where the government is without authority, or practically so, and what could be the purpose of non-intervention by others without French non-intervention which should be in the front line?"

Prelude to Demand.

The newspaper campaign combined with a similar one begun several days ago in Germany was believed by Rome diplomatic circles to have a definite purpose—perhaps a prelude to Italo-German demand that an international commission be placed along the French frontier to see that any non-intervention agreement is enforced.

Goering, ostensibly here on "vacation," was expected to return to Berlin next week.

Italy's answer to Britain's latest appeal for enforcement of Spanish non-intervention is being withheld, it was said, until Goering and Il Duce have determined definitely upon a common course of action.

Fascist circles said the two were believed drafting an invitation to Britain to join an anti-Communist front. If Britain declines, these sources asserted, Germany and Italy might feel free to support openly the Spanish Insurgents—whose government they have recognized as the legal regime in Spain.

A like invitation, it was said, would be extended to France but participation by that nation was considered most doubtful.

SPANISH FASCISTS DRIVE TOWARD SOUTH MALAGA

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Spanish Fascists drove tonight toward southern Malaga, with an army of 20,000 massed for attack against the barrier city of Marbella.

Their path to the important Socialist-held seaport was cleared, Fascists said, by capture of Estepona, 41 miles west of Malaga. But Marbella still had to be taken.

Madrid reports said a Socialist army attacked Fascists near Estepona in an effort to halt the advance. Fascist forces were bolstered, it was reported, by troops rushed to the front by truck and taxi.

Warplanes and warships participated in the Fascist push toward Malaga, with capture of Madrid apparently of second importance for the moment.

Many casualties were reported in the Estepona battle which lasted 48 hours. Socialist Valencia confirmed the attack, but said warplanes prevented an Insurgent effort to land troops from warships that slipped into the fortified harbor.

The roar of artillery fire could be heard in Gibraltar 30 miles away.

The battle for Madrid still was concentrated in the University City suburb today. Madrid defense chieftain Jose Miaja said one section of Clinic hospital was captured and a Fascist charge in that sector was repulsed.

STATE SCHOOL BILLS INTRODUCED IN HOUSE

Rivers' Program.

Major moves in the legislature all pointed toward quick consummation of the Rivers' promises, with the executive office devoting attention to ridding all departments of Talmadge influence.

The rapid succession of moves began with introduction in the house of three school measures.

One was to provide for the seven-month, state-guaranteed terms for common schools throughout Georgia. It would apply to the first 11 grades of public education.

A second bill authorized the board of education to furnish free school books for all students in the first 11 grades, or through high school.

The third bill was for reorganization of the board of education. One of the principal features was a provision that its membership should be increased from six to 11, with one member to be appointed from each of the 10 congressional districts. The Governor would be the eleventh member.

The old board had four members from the public, the Governor, and the state superintendent of schools.

Matching of U. S. Funds.

A significant feature embodying the policy of Rivers to co-operate with the Roosevelt administration was provision for the board of education to use its funds to match any money available from the federal government for educational purposes.

The old board would be abolished July 1, 1937, and the new board become effective that date.

Vote on Pensions.

The house moved for the second time to insure a vote on an old-age pension amendment this year rather than wait for the general election of 1938.

While the first measure introduced called for setting up a general election every two years in the late spring, the new one provides for a definite date in June of the odd-numbered years and includes provisions designed to make it stronger in event of an attack in the courts.

With attention to a provision that constitutional amendments must be voted on at general elections in which constables are chosen, the new bill would change the number of constables in each militia district from two to three. The additional constable in each district would be elected in June of the odd-numbered years, while the two regular constables now provided for by law would be chosen in November general elections of the even-numbered years.

This would afford the state an opportunity to vote on constitutional amendments once each year rather than once every two years.

June Election Date.

Date of the election would be the Tuesday after the first Monday in June.

While the bill would provide general elections every other year as long as it remained on the statute books, necessity for it arises from Georgia's inability to levy taxes to pay old-age pensions until the constitution is amended.

Tax proposals reaching the house included a revision of present income levy laws.

Tax Exemptions.

Simmons, of Decatur county, and others submitted a bill to reduce exemptions and to increase rates of levy.

While the present law exempts single men with a net income less than $1,500, and married men with net income of $3,500, the respective exemptions would be reduced to $1,000 and $2,500.

The present tax is one per cent on a graduated scale, reaching five per cent at $20,000 of net taxable income.

Simmons' new rate starts at one per cent for the first $2,000, and progresses one per cent for each additional $2,000, until it reaches a maximum of six per cent at $10,000.

The tax on corporation income would be raised from five to six per cent.

Simmons estimated the revenue from income taxes would be raised from the approximately $2,500,000 of last year to $5,000,000.

The same representative is working over a gross receipts and gross income levy of two per cent which he estimates would yield $20,000,000. As drawn, however, the bill would remove $10,000,000 in property taxes, he said.

Public Utilities Tax.

Representative Brown, of Peach county, submitted a tax for public utilities.

He would levy a two-mills per kilowatt hour tax against hydroelectric companies; a tax of 10 cents per 100 cubic feet against distributors of natural or artificial gas, and a four per cent gross receipts tax against telephone and telegraph companies' income over $50,000 a year.

Talmadge Investigation.

The house also received a bill to establish a five-man committee of assembly members to investigate conduct of governmental affairs during the term of Talmadge.

Slated to be headed by Senator Paul L. Lindsay, of Decatur, the committee would be allowed unlimited expenses, provided only that the Governor must approve warrants drawn by the committee chairman and secretary.

With two members from the senate and three from the house, the committee would have broad inquisitorial powers to conduct the investigation, and would be permitted to consume as much time as necessary.

Originally drawn with a flat appropriation of $250,000, the bill reached the house with several changes, all dealing with financial matters. The major change was in the method of drawing expenses, while another reduced the per diem allowance of members from $20 to $7 per day.

Harrison, Hamilton.

Differences between the Talmadge and Rivers administrations were brought to the fore again when bills came into the house for restoration of salaries to Comptroller General William B. Harrison and Treasurer George B. Hamilton during the period they were suspended from office by Governor Talmadge.

The acts would give Hamilton $5,266.67, and Harrison $5,366.67, which represents the salaries for the balance of 1936 after they were dismissed on February 14.

Talmadge ousted them when they refused to permit withdrawal of funds from the treasury in absence of a legislative appropriations bill.

Resolutions introduced in the house would commend each of the men for their action in opposing the governor's policy and his one-man rulership of state financial affairs. The resolutions can not be voted on until the 60-day session starts January 25, Speaker Harris ruled.

Uniform Freight Rates.

The house concurred in a senate resolution urging Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., to re-introduce into congress a provision requiring the interstate commerce commission to prescribe uniform freight rates for the entire nation.

Russell designed the proposed action to overcome what he termed discriminatory rates against the south, and as opening a way for the south to "develop her natural resources and attain her proper place in the nation."

The house adjourned until 10 a. m. Monday, and the senate until 11 a. m., the same day. A joint resolution of the two bodies calls an automatic recess starting at adjournment Monday and continuing until Wednesday, when the 10-day session will become adjourned sine die. The regular 60-day session will start January 25.

Sanger Wins Medal For 'Enriching Life'

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Gotham's Town Hall club tonight gave its annual medal to Margaret Sanger, birth control proponent, as the member who in the last year had made the "most conspicuous contribution to the enlargement and enrichment of life."

Chosen for the club's roll of honor were William Beebe, the explorer; Henry W. Taft, noted Ohio-born lawyer; Mary K. Simkhovitch, social economist and chairman of the New York City municipal housing authority; and Adolph Lewisohn, industrial magnate and philanthropist.

'Swarthout and Martini Delight In Opening Concert of New Series

By CHARLES F. CRANE.

Backstage with Gladys Swarthout and Nino Martini last night . . . two grand people getting their great pleasure from life in "working" and giving their audience a vocal treat.

Miss Swarthout—like a schoolgirl on graduation night, happy, smiling, loving the songs she is singing. She is thrilled by the singing of others, too, listens while Nino sings with all the rapt silence of the dress-shirted front row, or of the back balcony, where we are told the real music-lovers sit.

She is happy in her conversation with her manager and pianists and others who seem to persist in being backstage. But ever so often becomes serious and thoroughly practical. Autographs? She doesn't mind, but the sensible thing to do is to let people pay for them and give the money to unemployed musicians.

"It means a meal to some out-of-work musician."

Nino—a one-word description—as jovial and genial and joyous to backstagers as an Italian count who has just led his polo team to victory.

You know he was not "acting" in "The Gay Desperado." He was just being natural. Loves Hollywood and goes to see a movie at every opportunity. Not particular about the kind of picture. Nor his food—eats plainly and is not at all fastidious.

Makes little pig sounds backstage between numbers and declares he must not talk before singing as conversation is more straining. And then talks volubly, interspersing remarks with hummings of arias not on the program.

He and Miss Swarthout are first names to each other, and are like two kids at a party.

Miss Swarthout, after one of their duets:

"Nino!" She grabs his hand. "You must go out for a bow with me!"

By RALPH T. JONES.

Joint recital by Nino Martini and Gladys Swarthout, at the Georgia theater last night, served to introduce to Atlanta, in person, two young operatic artists already highly popular through their radio work. Two artists, distinctly of the new operatic school, but none the less charming thereby. Two artists who contrasted effectively and who revealed, in well-chosen programs, both natural gifts and technique of highest order.

As customary with concert programs of this character, the evening began with the somewhat heavier numbers, designed to display the range and depth of the voices and the excellent training of the singers.

Gradually, however, it lightened, with a sparkling little encore or two at first and gradually dissolving into the light and teasing little numbers that make every audience grin and, even if less pretentious, draw more applause than the most luscious arias.

Martini, even, sang "O Sole Mio," and "London Bridge Is Falling Down," while Miss Swarthout had a delightful number called "Love Was a Beggar" and another dramatic apostrophization of "The Wind."

And the program closed with that most frequently sung duet from the most frequently presented of operas, "Home to Our Mountains," from Trovatore.

There may have been, in fact, an encore or two after that but nearing press time prevented any waiting to find out.

Miss Swarthout is a very charming young American girl, last night dressed in red, with a voice extremely rich in its lower ranges, though it might be a trifle softer in the upper register. One would imagine she, a mezzo soprano, would find it easier than not to slip into contralto.

Martini adds to a voice of exceeding richness a personal charm and finesse of presentation that wins popularity. From his opening number to the last, the audience responded warmheartedly to his friendly grin and to the gracious insouciance of his bow. The kind of youngster—no matter what his exact age may be—you like at sight.

And there is a velvety depth and a purity of tone in his voice that is utterly delightful. Somehow I had gained the impression that many of the new vocal crop have a slight tendency to flat—though maybe it was my old ears at fault, it seemed so universal. Martini, however, restored faith in my own ability to judge tone. His every note was rounded perfectly, exactly as it should be.

While the new generation has Martini they can smile contentedly whenever the older folks talk about the great tenors of the past.

It was an auspicious opening concert for the current All-Star series. The same artists will repeat the same program at the same place tonight. Also, it is understood, before a second audience that will fill the Georgia theater just as it was filled last night.

HORNSBY IS ACCORDED CONTROL OF 'TICKETS'

and placed in jail; approved the Kreml method of controlling traffic and the school being conducted here, and likewise moved to obtain $300 for this purpose; ordered every member of the department and all supernumeraries and new applicants to be fingerprinted at once and that the prints be placed in the permanent record.

It also accepted the resignations of Patrolmen Carl Duncan and J. C. Ivie, who resigned before charges were filed against them, and revoked a number of beer and wine licenses, including the license of Hack Eibel's pool parlor on Broad street, which was described by Mayor Hartsfield as a place for gambling. He offered to furnish witnesses to the grand jury on this fact.

Melton was acquitted after the committee heard from three DeKalb county policemen, Chief J. T. Dailey, Captain Ed Foster and a patrolman, and approximately 50 witnesses who testified to Melton's good character. Councilman C. M. (Mac) Bolen made the motion to dismiss the charges and Councilman John T. Marler and Alderman Bridges concurred. Mayor Hartsfield, who heard only a part of the testimony, did not vote, Councilman Cecil Hester was absent.

Believed Truthful.

None of the DeKalb police testified that Melton "said he did not have a stolen car and did not know anything about one," as set forth in the charges. Chief Sturdivant and others said they believed him truthful and honest even after he was convicted of possessing the car. Melton recently applied for pension after being reinstated by the public safety committee and it was denied. The action of the committee places him again in good standing in the police department. He announced he wants only to draw his pension. William Schley Howard, Paul Carpenter and Ben T. Huiet were his lawyers. Assistant City Attorney Bond Almand conducted the trial.

Chief Hornsby, in reporting his investigation of "traffic ticket fixing," said "if the thing can be stopped from January 8 to now, then it can be stopped for good, and the only way this tagging system is worth while is for the law to be enforced."

He said he will not "fix any tickets" in the future. Alderman Bridges declared "officers must book their own tickets on the dockets" and not clear them through the traffic office.

Captain Malcom said he cancelled a large number because traffic laws on certain streets were put in suddenly and the public had to be educated. He asserted every cancellation was "best" for the traffic situation.

GOODS FOR RELIEF

WPA Heads Reports Commodity Distribution.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson, Georgia WPA administrator, said yesterday the surplus commodity division of the WPA in 1936 distributed food, clothing and other articles monthly to 42,500 destitute families on relief rolls of welfare agencies in Georgia.

She said the articles distributed aggregated 16,000,000 pounds of food, 2,000,000 garments, 500,000 household items, and 16,000 miscellaneous items.

She said they represented chiefly the products of the WPA sewing rooms and work shops, and the foodstuffs were obtained from the surplus commodity division of AAA.

All were treated at Grady hospital, where they were listed as Jefferson Fleming, 18, of 327 West Lake avenue, driver; Mrs. Lillian Masters, 25, of 161 West Peachtree place, and Wilburn Whitmore, of 574 Hemphill avenue.

Shirley Scores Again In Vehicle Now at Fox

In a role portraying a stowaway waif who eventually wins her chance in a Chinese amateur show, Shirley Temple heads the splendid cast in Twentieth Century-Fox's new film, "Stowaway," which opened last night at the Fox theater for a week's run.

With little Shirley supplying the songs and laughter, Alice Faye the beauty and part of a love triangle, Robert Young the devil-may-care attitude, and Arthur Treacher the comedy and quick lines, the Fox theater has a real hit. Not only for the kiddies and many adults who love and admire Shirley, but for the others who enjoy a good show and sparkling entertainment.

The story deals with Shirley's acquaintance with Robert Young after she is found hiding in his car on a cruise ship. But the little actress turns Cupid and bows the arrow that brings lovely blonde Alice Faye into Young's life.

Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, J. Edward Bromberg and Astrid Allwyn complete the cast. William A. Seiter directed the picture. Popeye in "Sinbad the Sailor," and newsreel complete a most interesting two-hour program. —W. T. R.

Sonja Henie Feature Fox Preview Tonight

Every Saturday night is preview night at the Fox theater, bringing the choice productions of the five major producing companies, Paramount, Universal, Warner Brothers, R.-K.-O. and Twentieth Century-Fox, regardless where they might play at a later date. This makes it possible to see favorite pictures before their scheduled run.

Here is the preview for tonight: "One in a Million," bringing the queen of the silver skates, twice winner of the World's Olympic figure-skating championship, lovely Sonja Henie. Although Miss Henie is new to the screen, the rest of the cast is a well-seasoned one, including Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ned Sparks, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Arline Judge, Borrah Minevitch and his gang, Atlanta's own Dixie Dunbar, Leah Ray, and Shirley Deane.

Garbo, Taylor Co-Star In 'Camille' at Grand

It is a vivid and thrilling love story, this famous tale by Alexandre Dumas, and its transfer to the screen was admirably accomplished by George Cukor, who directed.

As for the stars, Taylor was never seen to better advantage than in this film, and Miss Garbo wins sympathy as the Parisian beauty who abandoned wealth and social position for the one man who ever meant anything to her.

In the supporting cast are Lionel Barrymore, Elizabeth Allan, Jessie Ralph, Henry Daniell, Lenore Ulric and Laura Hope Crews, all of whom add greatly to the general worth of the film. Garbo and Taylor fans will like this picture. The love scenes, of which there are many, are sincerely and warmly played. Photography is of a high order.

Interesting short subjects complete a fine bill.—L. F.

Bobby Breen Is Star In Hit at Paramount

Bobby Breen, juvenile radio star, emerges as an actor of ability in "Rainbow on the River," which opened yesterday at the Paramount theater for a week's run.

Of course, he is given an opportunity to sing in this picture, which tells a tale of a young boy's attempt to flee the luxury of a mansion in New York to return to the place where he was reared, a negro mammy's humble cabin in New Orleans.

The brilliant boy tenor has a role which fits his talents, and he makes the most of it. His song selections range from negro spirituals to modern popular numbers. His voice is excellent.

Also in the film are Charles Butterworth, Benita Hume, Alan Mowbray, Henry O'Neill, Marilyn Knowlden, May Robson, the Hall Johnson choir, and Louise Beavers, who is cast as a devoted negro slave.

The film was produced by Sol Lesser and directed by Kurt Neumann.

Rialto Comedy Drama Captivates Audience

A gay, care-free and entertaining story, "More Than a Secretary," came to the screen of the Rialto theater yesterday in the start of a week's run and completely captivated its audience.

The film's cast is headed by Jean Arthur, Lionel Stander and George Brent. They are supported by Ruth Donnelly, Reginald Denny, Dorothea Kent, Charles Halton, Geraldine Hall and many others.

The picture is one of the brightest and most entertaining seen in a long while. It ranks with those classics, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Theodora Goes Wild" and "Talk of the Town," which, as you know, is saying plenty.

Miss Arthur is splendid, as usual, and Stander, of the bushy hair and puzzled expression, is up to his usual high standard. Brent and the others turn in capable performances.

RAIL PROBE IS HALTED WHILE SOLONS STUDY RECORDS OF EXCHANGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Senate investigators abruptly halted their inquiry into railroad financing today, after listening to a fiery two-hour debate over policies of the New York Stock Exchange.

Wheeler postponed further hearings until January 25, with the explanation that "the committee needs time to study certain memoranda we obtained only today" from the stock exchange files.

Stock exchange attorneys blocked committee efforts to examine them earlier he asserted.

Adjournment came a few minutes after investigators read a memorandum from the exchange's files warning that railroad holding companies "may come to be regarded as anti-social and thus to be the object of political attack."

Would List Securities.

The note was written by J. M. D. Hoxsey, executive assistant to the exchange listing committee, in recommending the securities of Alleghany Corporation, a Van Sweringen holding company, be listed for trading.

"There is likely to be a strong public protest," Hoxsey's memorandum read, "if it should become apparent that any large part of the industry of the country is virtually controlled through minority holdings."

It called attention to "certain possible weaknesses in the financial structure" and remarked that "any prolonged anti-railroad agitation might easily render it of very small, if any value."

"Don't you think the public was entitled to know what the exchange's expert thought of this kind of issue?" Walker asked.

Defends Exchange Heads.

The tall, full-voiced broker hotly defended the propriety of exchange officials participating in the sale of a stock issue at a time when they were deciding whether it should be awarded an exchange listing.

Wheeler inquired whether J. P. Morgan & Company had given Whitney 1,000 shares of Alleghany Corporation stock at $15 below the market price, at about the time other Alleghany securities were being considered for listing.

"I don't think your implication is a fair one," Whitney said. "If what you say is true, I don't think it would in any way affect my judgment as to whether a stock should be listed."

Wheeler argued that stock exchange officials were in "a quasi-public position," and compared them to a city councilman who might help sell public utility stock while that utility was seeking a city franchise.

He read into the record the names of 17 members of the stock exchange board of governors, who he said had participated in the sale of Alleghany securities.

Participate in All Cases.

Denying that this list had "any significance," Whitney said the same men "participated in every large issue."

Earlier the committee heard testimony that the Van Sweringen enterprises had obtained a $39,500,000 loan from J. P. Morgan banking syndicate in 1930, when collapsing stock prices threatened to force them to throw more than 1,000,000 shares of Alleghany stock on the market.

William C. Potter, board chairman of the Guaranty Trust Company, which participate in the loan, testified that "unloading" of these securities "might have started a general market decline."

"It might have wrecked a lot of banks and brokerage houses?" Wheeler asked.

"If you emphasize the word 'might,' decidedly so," Potter replied.

Francis Ward Paine, of Paine, Webber and Company, told the committee that about $19,000,000 of the loan had been used to close out the Van Sweringen corporation's trading account with his brokerage house.

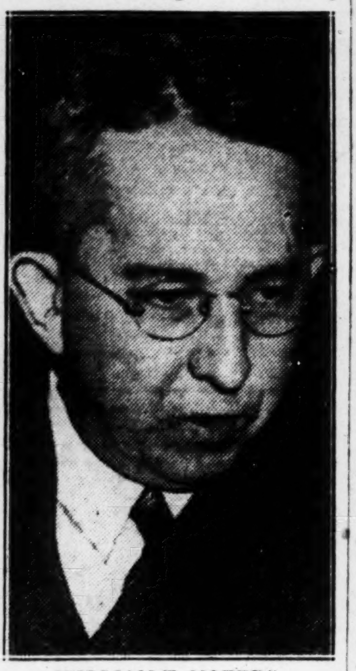
Found Guilty in Holdup



WILLIAM T. MOYERS.

MOYERS IS CONVICTED IN $30,000 ROBBERY

er or not Woodruff owed Moyers a commission.

Stephens, first speaker for the state, cited at length decisions from rulings in other states which upheld the state's contention that from the evidence and the defendant's statement a robbery was committed. He said there had been no Georgia appeals court decision on a similar case.

Hold Weapon Concealed.

The solicitor general in closing the state's arguments stressed the fact that while Moyers had licenses permitting him to carry a pistol, the weapon he had in his possession at the time of the alleged holdup was not carried in full view, according to requirements of the license, but concealed under his coat.

"Collection of money by the use of force and intimidation at the point of a gun, constitutes robbery in the legal definition, even if the money collected is in payment of a just debt," he declared.

In his charge to the jury, Judge Etheridge directed them to return a verdict for Moyers to serve from 2 to 20 years if they found him guilty of robbery.

"If you find from the evidence that Mr. Woodruff declined to accede to the demand of the accused and give him such sum of money; and if you find further that the accused then threatened to kill said Mr. Woodruff unless this sum of money was given him, and that thereafter one Thomas K. Glenn entered the office of Mr. Woodruff . . . and the accused repeated his threat to kill Woodruff and Glenn if his demands for $30,000 were not complied with, demanding that Mr. Glenn go and bring the money and, if you believe that, acting under fear of personal violence from accused under said threats Glenn left the office . . . and re-entered with $30,000 which he delivered to the accused, then the accused would be guilty of robbery, even if the accused intended to apply the sum to the alleged pre-existing debt."

Disagree on Charge.

Defense counsel disagreed with several legal points in the charge, but the jury was not called back.

If no evidence is found of intimidation, force, or fear, then a verdict of acquittal would be justified, the judge charged.

In a two-hour-and-five-minute statement to the jury in his own behalf Thursday, Moyers said he had only obtained money that was due him in commissions from funds collected by the Liberty League of Georgia and maintained he did not use force other than threat of civil suit in obtaining the $30,000.

He admitted pulling his gun once when he thought Walter Brown, Woodruff's secretary, was endeavoring to force him from the room, but said the pistol was placed back in his pocket when those assembled returned to their seats.

QUEEN MOTHER TO JOIN JULIANA, BERNHARD

The couple have been at Krynica, Poland, but it was understood they planned to go to Igls, near Innsbruck, Austria, to meet the Queen.

Juliana and Bernhard, it was announced, will attend the coronation of King George VI of Great Britain May 12. The Crown Princess will represent her mother while the Prince will attend as an unofficial guest, it was stated.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—President Roosevelt signed a bill today granting a $5,000 annual pension to Mrs. Grace G. Coolidge, widow of President Calvin Coolidge.

NINE BELIEVED KILLED IN MEXICAN AIR CRASH

Air Liner Missing for Three Days Found in Dense Jungle.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The Mexican Aviation Company announced late today an airliner missing three days had been found in a dense jungle in Veracruz state, with all its nine occupants apparently killed when the plane crashed and burned.

The disaster, which occurred while the plane was making a regular run between Mexico City and Minatilan, evidently raised the week's toll in Mexican air accidents to 12.

Three persons were killed in a plane crackup near San Cristobal Las Casas, Chiapas.

Pilot Al McCullough, flying a Pan-American Airways machine in the search for the Mexican Aviation Company's liner, radioed the company he had discovered it near Playa San Vicente, Veracruz, close to the Oaxaca state line.

He flew low enough to decipher the registration number and definitely establish the identity of the ship, he reported.

Although soldiers and Indians armed with sharp machetes prepared to cut their way through the jungle toward the almost inaccessible spot, company officials expressed the opinion it would take days, perhaps weeks, before they could reach the wreckage.

McCullough said the plane was ruined. He said he was almost certain the six passengers and three crewmen were killed. He saw no signs of life.

McCullough, an experienced flyer, was the pilot who took former President Gerardo Machado, of Cuba, from Havana to Nassau, Bahamas, in August, 1933, when the Cuban President fled from the revolution which overthrew his long rule.

The wreckage of the plane which crashed in Chiapas was found yesterday, its three occupants dead.

JOHN BARRYMORE SUED FOR DIVORCE, ALIMONY

She asked the court to restrain John "or such other persons who are in possession of community property, from disposing or hypothecating them."

The complaint said she was subjected to "extreme mental and physical cruelty" and described Barrymore's conduct as "inhuman."

Miss Barrie hinted that the "great lover," now verging on 55, had tried to keep her from pursuing "her profession as an actress."

"On various occasions," the complaint said, "Barrymore became jealous of alleged attentions to Miss Barrie from various men, all of which were false and fiction of the defendant's imagination."

She said John, "well knowing she was an actress," tried to keep her from going on the stage. The complaint also objected to Barrymore's "mode of living," which Miss Barrie said was "obnoxious."

The current Barrymore-Barrie embroglio, although probably the most serious, is not their first. Since Miss Barrie, a wide-eyed schoolgirl from Hunter College, New York, first crashed her way into Barrymore's hospital bedroom on the heels of an ardent "fan letter" a year ago, the pair have been engaged in alternate rows and reconciliations.

Their romance first achieved national attention after Barrymore's third wife, Dolores Costello, sued for divorce. The actor, supposedly in a belated effort to make peace with the blonde actress, mother of two of his children, dashed from New York to Hollywood.

Elaine promptly dashed after him, and the romantic race achieved the status of a transcontinental "love derby."

Miss Barrie caught up at Chicago but Barrymore slipped out of a Pullman car window, legged across Chicago to the Santa Fe station where he boarded an outbound flier for the west.

Miss Barrie hot-footed behind him, stopping off at radio stations to broadcast pleas to her "Caliban" not to let "other persons come between us."

She finaly dropped out of the race at Kansas City, but a few weeks later followed Barrymore to Hollywood where the actor was presumably in seclusion wit hhis brother, Lionel.

Got Ring and John.

They had another spat over whether Elaine should give John back his diamond ring. Elaine ultimately got not only the ring but John, in a hasty airplane elopement to Yuma, where Justice Earl A. Freeman, "marrying justice" of the Arizona border town, married them.

John grabbed a hasty drink off a nearby restaurant bar, and the newlyweds dashed back to Los Angeles in time for the actor to keep a film engagement and announce he was "happily settled down."

This was on November 9, 1936. One month and 23 days later the actor, his talented profile registering the best Barrymore, hauteur, stalked out of the Trocadero after a quarrel which he described as "trivial" but which Elaine alleged in her complaint consisted of calling her "violent, vile, obscene, indecent, profane and opprobious names and threatening to kill or seriously maim her."

John has been living at the home of Ken Keller, his physical trainer, and Miss Barrie has remained with her mother. The actor has declined to comment on the affair.

Barrymore previously was married to Katherine Harris, stage-struck New York society girl; Mrs. Leonard Thomas, who writes under the pen name of "Michael Strange"; and Dolores Costello, daughter of Maurice Costello, famous actor of two decades ago.

Admiral's Uniform Puts Byrd in Porters' 'Ranks'

OGDEN, Utah, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, twice mistaken for a railway station attendant, "guessed" today he'd have to do something about his uniform.

"Some time ago, at the Union station in Kansas City," he said, "a woman found a purse and handed it to me to return to the owner.

"That wasn't so bad, but this morning as the train pulled into Ogden another woman asked me where Provo was and whether her ticket would take her to Salt Lake City.

"The climax came when I arrived here slightly ahead of time, and Ogden city officials sent to meet me found me strolling around the station. I could tell by their hesitancy they also suspected I might be a uniformed railway employe.

"Begins to look as if I'll have to do something about it."

Sliced Frankfurters Give Variety to This Tasty Soup

THE COOK'S NOTE BOOK

By RUTH CHAMBERS.

Soup is an important part of the fare in many households, and it is almost overlooked in others. Its place on the menu varies. It may be simply an appetizer, or it may be the main dish.

Clear soup is chiefly flavor and water and has almost no food value. It serves as a pleasant stimulant to the appetite. On the other hand, a hearty soup, containing meat, vegetables, cereals, even dumplings, is similar to a stew and may serve as a meal in itself. And between those two extremes is a wide variety of soups.

TODAY'S DINNER
Onion Soup with Cheese
Large Mixed Vegetable Salad
Apple Dumplings

Soups may be divided into two general classifications, those made with a meat stock base and those made without stock. Cream soups are an example of those made without stock, although sometimes meat stock is used to give them flavor.

In fact, flavor is of utmost importance in soup-making. For that reason as much of the flavor of meat as possible is extracted to make meat stock.

Meat Cuts for Soup.

Economical cuts of meat, containing bone, are used in soup making; for instance, the shin or lower part of the round, the neck, the hind shank and the knuckle bone of the chuck. There should be about three parts of lean meat to one part of bone.

Veal shanks are not so well flavored as beef and are seldom used alone.

Lamb or mutton neck and shanks are used to make broth, especially the well-known Scotch broth, served with meat cut in cubes and with barley and vegetables.

To Make Soup Stock.

In making soup stock, the meat is put on in cold water which is gradually brought to a simmering temperature. The cooking should be continued at this temperature for three or four hours to extract as much of meat juices and flavor as possible. For this reason, it is well to cut the meat in small pieces and to break the bones. For brown stock, the meat may be browned before cooking.

Ingredients for Soups.

Besides the meat flavor, seasonings are added to the soup. The French cooks, who have the reputation of being the world's best soup-makers, are adept in the use of seasonings. Among those herbs and spices which may be used in making soup are bay-leaf, thyme, parsley, marjoram, allspice, celery salt, cloves, mace, onion salt, paprika, and white and black pepper.

Vegetables which are good to serve in soup are celery, carrots, beans, peas, green peppers, onions, turnips and tomatoes. Left-overs of meat and vegetables—the bones of a roast, for instance—may be used in soup-making.

Meat which has been used for soup retains its food value and therefore should not be discarded. Only its flavor has been extracted. It can therefore be used with condiments or vegetables to give it flavor, as, for instance, in hash, croquettes or scalloped dishes.

Here is a basic recipe for brown soup stock.

Brown Soup Stock.

Five pounds shin of beef and marrow bone, 3 to 5 quarts of water, 3 sprigs parsley, 1 small bay-leaf, 2 sprigs marjoram, 1-3 cup sliced onion, 1-2 cup diced carrots, 1-2 cup sliced celery and leaves, 10 peppercorns, 1 tablespoon salt.

Cut meat into small pieces. Put one-half into the soup kettle and cover with water. Scrape marrow from bones and melt in large frying pan. When hot, add remaining half of beef and brown nicely on all sides. Add browned meat and bones to the soup kettle and bring slowly to the boiling point, then reduce the heat to a minimum and simmer for three or four hours. Vegetables and seasonings should be added in the last hour of cooking. Strain and keep in a cool place until wanted.

Onion Soup with Cheese.

Four cups beef stock, 4 large onions, 8 tablespoons grated cheese—(preferably Parmesan), 2 tablespoons butter, 4 slices bread.

Slice onions very fine and fry them in melted butter until they are brown. Then add the brown stock and boil until the onions are tender, about 15 minutes. Toast slices of bread and place in the bottom of a tureen. Pour hot stock over the toast. Sprinkle with grated cheese and serve immediately.

English Tomato Soup.

Four cups brown stock, 1 No. 3 can tomatoes, 1 sliced onion, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons boiled rice.

Add tomatoes and onion to stock. Simmer for an hour, then press through a sieve and season with Worcestershire sauce. Return to fire and add boiled rice. Serve hot.

Oxtail Soup.

One oxtail, 3 pints beef stock, 1-2 cup diced carrots, 1-2 cup sliced or diced turnip, 1-2 cup chopped onion, 1-2 cup diced celery, 1 teaspoon lemon juice—strained, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper, few grains cayenne pepper.

Have oxtail sliced in pieces 1-2 inch thick. Wash and drain on a towel. Season with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Brown on all sides in fat, then add three pints of beef stock to the pan and simmer for one hour. Add vegetables and cook for 15 to 20 minutes longer. Season with salt and a few grains of cayenne pepper, one teaspoon strained lemon juice and one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

BELGIAN MINE STRIKE IS HALTED BY CABINET

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The cabinet tonight headed off, at least temporarily, a general strike of approximately 125,000 miners by deciding to institute a 45-hour week.

Representatives of the colliery workers agreed at a meeting not to call the walkout tomorrow as scheduled, although they decided to leave the final decision on compromise proposals offered by the government and the employers to an extraordinary meeting of the miners' executive group next Wednesday.

The miners had determined to call the walkout unless their hours were reduced from the 48-hour week in conformity with a pledge made by the government during a major colliery strike last June.

TERM 'DICTATORSHIP' IS OFTEN FALLACIOUS, ATHENS SPEAKER SAYS

Italian Professor Defines Rulership Before Affairs Institute.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Gaetano Salvemini, Italian professor, author and lecturer, said tonight it is fallacious to describe intervention of the government in economic life as "dictatorship."

Addressing the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Georgia, Salvemini said:

"President Roosevelt is often called a dictator because he intervenes in the processes of production and distribution. The truth is that the policy of intervention in economic life is characteristic neither of free, nor of despotic, nor of oligarchical, nor of democratic governments.

"All governments in all periods have intervened . . . only by virtue of the fact that they have built roads, imposed taxes and issued currency.

"President Roosevelt would be a dictator if, besides intervening in economic life, he suppressed personal rights, political liberties, and parliamentary institutions; if the citizens of the United States were no longer allowed to read whatever newspapers they liked; if they could not assemble freely; if those who criticized President Roosevelt—for instance Mr. Hoover or Mr. Ford—were sent to a concentration camp.

"This would be Fascism, Nazism, or dictatorship, not the intervention of the government in the business of production and distribution of wealth."

Classing Russia, Germany, and Italy as "dictatorial regimes," Professor Salvemini declared it his belief that Hitler should pay tremendous royalties to Mussolini, and Mussolini, in turn, to Stalin, since Italy had imitated Russia in enacting Fascist laws and Germany had imitated Italy in setting up her Nazi legislation.

"Whereas the Communist dictatorship was set up with the aim of abolishing private ownership, of the means of production and of distribution, both the Fascist and the Nazi dictatorships claim to have saved Europe from Communism and maintain that their object is to uphold private ownership.

SHOOTING AT PRISON REPORTED OVER FOOD

Senator Ennis Urges Probe of Milledgeville Prison and Insane Hospital.

Senator J. Howard Ennis, of Milledgeville, told the state senate yesterday he was "informed" a shooting at the Milledgeville state prison Thursday night took place in a "fight over food."

The senator disclosed the shooting had taken place in a speech in which he urged the visiting committees to make a "thorough investigation" of the needs of the prison.

Superintendent Rollie Lawrence, of the prison, said in Milledgeville, the shooting took place when three convicts in a group being taken to the prison farm attacked Robert Holliday, a guard.

Lawrence said the wounded prisoner was Harry Clements, serving 8 to 10 years for robbery, from Crisp county. He said he was hit in the arm.

He said the man listed as Clements and two other prisoners surrendered after the shooting.

Ennis urged the investigations of both the prison and the Milledgeville state hospital for the insane be undertaken thoroughly.

He suggested that prisoners be transferred to the new federal-aid prison in Tattnall county, making room at the present prison for negro inmates of the hospital.

He said room was neded for 1,500 more patients at the hospital.

R. L. RAMSEY SPEAKS AT BERRY COLLEGE

Sunday Exercises To Close 35th Anniversary Observance.

MOUNT BERRY, Ga., Jan. 15.—"This is the most dynamic era in the history of the world and all must do their part to lead onward the march of progress," Ralph L. Ramsey, secretary of the Georgia Education Association, declared here today in an address at the exercises featuring the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the founding of Berry Schools and College.

Special exercises have been held here every day this week, the main event being the anniversary exercises Wednesday at which Dr. H. W. Chase, chancellor of New York University, was the main speaker. Ramsey described what he felt as the trend in education and civilization. Miss Berry has magnified the human spirit so that it may contribute more richly to the next generation," he said.

"This is the most convincing era in the history of the world and all must do their part to lead onward the march of progress."

WILLIAM B. ATWATER, NOTED AVIATOR, DIES

World War Flier Instituted Japan's First Air Mail Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—William B. Atwater, one of the first airplane pilots to gain a license in the United States, and who instituted Japan's first air mail service, died at his Park Avenue home here Thursday night. He was 47.

A flying student of the late Glenn H. Curtiss in San Diego, Cal., in 1911, Atwater took two hydroplanes and a biplane to Japan in 1912, demonstrating to Japanese military and naval authorities. For his work, the Emperor of Japan conferred on him the Order of the Rising Sun.

During the World War, he flew for a short time in France and then was put in command of the United States naval air station at Bolsena, Italy.

In August, 1930, Atwater set the first non-refueling endurance flight record for amphibians and broke the former official mark for light seaplanes. He had been aloft 22 hours 18 minutes and 32 seconds. He made the flight in the capacity of a test pilot for the American Aeronautical Association.

Atwater, a native of Silver Lake, Pa., is survived by his widow, the former Mrs. Mabel Harvey Shedd, of Chicago, who was his second wife. His first marriage, to Mrs. Liliian Platt, widow of Thomas C. Platt, United States senator from New York, was ended by divorce in 1927.

UPSWING IN BUSINESS IS NOTED IN VALDOSTA

VALDOSTA, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Sharp increases in total bank debits and in Valdosta during 1936 over 1935, and reports of merchants, businessmen, and manufacturers of sales increases reflect the upward trend of business toward normalcy in this south Georgia city during the past year.

Officers of the Valdosta Clearing House Association, handling debits for the two banks operating here reported an increase of more than $9,000,000 for the totals of 1936 over 1935. Building contractors were pleased with a report of construction permits, issued through the city clerk's office. It showed 1936 building was 52 per cent greater than the total building in the city in 1935.

The clearing house report showed debits for 1936 of $47,257,391.83 in 1936 and $38,098,000 in 1935.

Building permits totaled $212,271 for 1936, as compared to $139,050 for the preceding year.

Businessmen, too, reported increased receipts for the past year, "the best year" since 1929, when the depression began.

With the coming of January, and an indication that building will continue on the upgrade here—already more than $40,000 in permits have been issued through the office of the clerk—and with indication that business conditions will follow a general trend toward greater receipts. Optimism is at a high pitch here.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—The nation is in the "spring time of prosperity," according to Mills B. Lane, Savannah, chairman of the board of directors of the Citizens & Southern Bank, who was in Macon today.

"Good and bad periods come in cycles, just like the seasons of the year," philosophied the director. We've just had our winter of depression and now we are in the spring time. I think it will continue, too."

Mr. Lane came to Macon this morning to attend the monthly executive committee meeting of the Bibb Manufacturing Company, of which he is a member, and also the weekly meeting of the bank directors.

DROP TO 40 DEGREES PREDICTED FOR TODAY

A moderate drop in temperature will put a little tang in the air today, however, by sunshine part of the day, the weather bureau forecast last night.

The mercury is expected to start at about 40 degrees and climb into the low fifties during the day.

Yesterday the mercury started at 57, dropped to 54 at noon and climbed to 56 at 6 o'clock.

BEST TOBACCO SOILS DESCRIBED AT TIFTON

Experiment Station Specialists Explain Problems to Growers.

TIFTON, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—J. M. Carr, tobacco specialist of the Coastal Plains Experiment Station, told a state-wide meeting of leaf growers here today "soils that produce high yields of other crops will not produce profitable crops of flue-cured tobacco."

"Such soils grow the plant too large and coarse for fine quality," he said.

"In order to produce fine quality, it is necessary that the plant be fed a definite and known ration in much the same manner that high producing animals are fed.

"To avoid the unknown, only soils low in natural fertility, but of good physical qualities, should be used."

J. G. Gaines, tobacco specialist at the Experiment Station, another speaker at the meeting, told the growers "an ounce of preventive effort against tobacco diseases is worth many pounds of cure attempted after the disease becomes pronounced."

"As soon as the tobacco growers as a group realize the practical importance of timely employing preventive measures, a long step will have been made in solving some of their most serious problems," he said.

Gaines said the "two most important" tobacco diseases in the south Georgia belt are downy mildew, which attacks seedlings in the bed, and root knot, which causes plants in the field to wilt and die.

"The only effective method known for successfully controlling mildew in tobacco plant beds is to grow the plants in hotbeds under glass where artificial heat is supplied and the temperature kept at 70 degrees or above practically all the time during the mildew period," he said.

"Root knot can best and most economically be controlled by planting tobacco on land that has been devoted to the growth of a root knot resistant crop for two or more years."

W. S. Brown, acting director of the State Agricultural Extension Service, said the meeting here today was planned "to give tobacco growers as much practical information as possible about the latest recommended practices in growing the leaf."

E. C. Westbrook, Extension Service cotton and tobacco specialist, led a round-table discussion of growers' problems.

JEWISH LEADER URGES RELIGIOUS DEVOTION

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Jews gathered here today from all parts of the nation and discussed prejudice against their race which they said was developing in America.

Samuel B. Finkel, of New York, president of the National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods, said, however, that religion should be the principal interest of Jews.

"We don't want any Father Coughlins in our rabbinate," he said. "If there is any fist-shaking, let it be in the cause of religion."

His address marked the opening session of the council of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The brotherhoods and sisterhoods are also meeting.

A Sunday session has been set aside for discussion of the problem of anti-Semitism. Nationally known speakers are on the program.

Today's session emphasized the need for added religious devotion.

Rabbi Irving F. Reichert, of San Francisco, branded most of the Jewish preaching today as "appallingly mediocre and worse."

He said rabbis should be freed from many unnecessary tasks. He predicted the result would be that many a "rabbi now regarded as a positive cure for insomnia would be transfigured into a dynamic, challenging preacher."

Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, also of San Francisco, said "Too many people regard synagogues and churches as museums."

"Judaism," he asserted, "still has a message for the world today and the synagogue is the logical and psychological place for the dissemination of that message."

Rabbi Louis Witt, of Dayton, Ohio, called for more prayer and worship in the home.

"We must translate prayer more into symbol or ceremonial," he said. "We have been using too much only words in prayer.

"We must put more worship into the home. The modern Jewish home is as bare of religious or historic values as are those ancient sandheaps in the Holy Land."

ROOSEVELT TO REOPEN WATERWAY PACT DRIVE

President Discloses Conversations With Canada on St. Lawrence Project.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he is reopening his long fight for a deep-water shipping canal and a vast public power development on the St. Lawrence river.

He told reporters the United States is discussing with Canada a formal conference on a new treaty to authorize the project.

Friends of the multi-million-dollar development hope the new treaty will be ready for submission to the senate at its present session. Mr. Roosevelt said he had no idea, however, whether their hopes will materialize.

Asked if the treaty would embrace a Niagara Falls power and improvement project, he said the physical aspects of the treaty included everything from the Great Lakes at the head of Lake Superior, to Montreal, Quebec.

Tried in Vain.

Mr. Roosevelt tried in vain two years ago to win senate ratification of a treaty covering the proposed development.

In recent weeks, however, officials of the Great Lakes-St.Lawrence Tidewater Association reported that several senators who opposed ratification in 1934 were missing from the new senate.

The treaty turned down called for international co-operation to complete a 27-foot channel from Great Lakes cities to the Atlantic.

It provided also that New York state would receive this country's full share of 1,100,000 horsepower of electricity proposed to be generated at an international dam. For this the state was to contribute $89,000,000 of this country's share of the cost.

Estimate of Cost.

Estimates of the total cost have ranged from $250,000,000 to $1,350,000,000.

The senate foreign relations committee, in approving the treaty in 1932, estimated the cost to the United States would be $27,453,000 and Canada's share $270,976,000.

A number of objections were raised. Mississippi Valley senators protested that a provision limiting the flow from the Great Lakes through the Chicago drainage canal would prevent the maintenance of a nine-foot channel on the Lakes-to-Gulf waterway. Opponents also contended some of the American share of the cost would go for Canadian labor and materials.

DEGENERATE IS SOUGHT IN MATTSON KIDNAPING

sum of $28,000 ransom demanded added to the belief the crime was the work of a person either demented or interested in revenge, rather than one seeking profit. Dr. W. W. Mattson's comparatively moderate financial status was also cited as proof the crime was not a "professional" job.

The revelation came as officers' interest apparently was centered in questioning of numerous persons already held in jail from Bellingham, Wash., to Sacramento, Cal.

All known activities today were in connection with these detentions except one unexplained trip by an automobile load of federal, state and city officers from Everett, Wash., near where the Mattson boy was found slain, toward Lake Cassidy, east of that town.

New "Hideout."

One source said the officers were investigating a cabin described as a "perfect hideout." Attention was brought to it, the source added, when a newspaper clipping discussing the kidnaping was found on the floor of the building.

Surrender of a much-sought former convict and questioning of an erstwhile insane asylum patient previously marked outward activity in the hunt for the brutal killer.

Disclose Details.

The conference was announced as designed to give Dr. Mattson an opportunity to clear up some of the mystery still veiling the 15 days of suspense between the abduction and the finding of Charles' beaten and frozen body last Monday.

Some sources recalled that the children, William, 16, and Muriel, 14, who witnessed the kidnaping, evidently had not been summoned to look through the police rogues' gallery for possible likenesses of the brutal abductor.

One informant said this might be taken to mean the federal agents knew who the abductor was.

The projected departure of the Mattsons suggested their presence here no longer was required by officers.

Haynes Gives Up.

The hunted ex-convict, Fred Orrin Haynes, 46, walked into the Seattle police station this morning, sat for 15 minutes without being recognized and then announced:

"They've got me all wrapped around this kidnaping. I didn't have anything to do with it."

Although Haynes was booked on signed orders of Federal Agent A. E. Deere and Seattle Detective V. E. Webb, and questioned for more than an hour, Detective Captain Marshall Scrafford said he had "no apparent connection" with the Mattson case.

Haynes, a former inmate of Folsom prison, California, had been sought since Wednesday. A San Jose, Cal., woman reported renting a cottage near Seattle to a man answering his description and a woman companion. Federal agents and state police searched the furnished cottage yesterday but reported no discoveries of importance.

Arthur Madsen, 26, who admitted once being an inmate of a hospital for the insane in Washington state, was held at Sacramento, Cal., for investigation. Police Captain Fritz Kaminsky declined to say whether he or federal agents instigated the "hold" order against the man.

Madsen Knows Doctor.

Madsen, who was arrested after a bank official reported he acted strangely, admitted, Kaminsky said, that he knew Dr. Mattson, father of the slain boy, and that a member of his family had once been treated by the physician. Dr. Mattson said he did not recall the man.

One theory widely held during Charles' kidnaping and the search for his slayer is that the crime was the work of a demented former patient who possibly was actuated by a fancied grudge against the physician rather than hope of profit.

Madsen, according to Kaminsky, had papers showing he left a PWA camp at Tillamook, Ore., January 2, and denied knowing anything about the kidnaping.

"Madsen might be entirely innocent," Kaminsky said, "but I place him as a definite suspect."

At Bellingham, Lee Haskell Fowler sulked in a solitary cell and refused to tell officers of his activities between December 27, when Charles was kidnaped, and January 9. Fowler has been in jail since January 9, having confessed the $900 robbery of a milling company.

Still Hold Auto.

At Everett, Wash., near where the boys' batetred body was found, officers continued to hold an automobile as possibly the machine in which the child's body was transported to snow-covered brush land south of that city.

They examined a machinist's hammer, perhaps the instrument used to crush Charles' skull, and a pile of boy's clothing covered with blood.

The clothing was discovered in a shack about five miles from where Charles' body was found. Unofficial sources said the garments were slightly too large for Charles, but might have been given him to replace light clothing he wore when taken from his Tacoma home December 27.

Dr. Mattson indicated he would relate in his press conference at least a part of the story of his 15-day effort to contact the abductor and pay the $28,000 ransom.

However, he said the primary purpose of the conference was to thank the public for its aid and sympathy.

Dr. Mattson said recent published reports purporting to give details of his quest, and of receiving three notes in Charles' handwriting were "fabrications." Close friends of the family also said there was little fact in the accounts.

Meanwhile the widespread manhunt brought the arrest of many potential suspects in Washington, California and as far east as Wyoming but officers said most of the detained gave satisfactory accounts of their activities at the time of the abduction.

Cafe Which Drew Judge's Wrath Figures Now in White Slave Case

A cafe which last year brought condemnation from Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood when he sentenced Eddie Stephens to the penitentiary for sending threatening letters through the mail to Shirley Temple's mother, figured largely yesterday in a hearing on a fugitive complaint against William Tarbush, of 539 Central avenue, before United States Commissioner Ed S. Griffith.

Tarbush, in his statement before Judge Griffith, denied charges made by Christine Pogue, of 310 Pryor street, and Mogene Wooten, of 304 Rawson street, that he paid for tickets to Birmingham and that he later met them in that city in July of last year. He had seen them drinking beer in the Central avenue cafe, where he said he worked at odd intervals early last year, but that was his only acquaintance with them, he told Griffith.

The cafe, which has since changed hands, was the subject of an attack by the federal judge, who at that time flayed city officials for allowing minors to work in beer parlors, allowing young girls to work as waitresses and allowing young people to frequent them. The judge's statement resulted in an ordinance and other action barring the practice of employing minors.

Tarbush was ordered held under $5,000 bond for appearance in Birmingham. The complaint was filed by FBI agents.

Another man, named fy federal agents as Gene Neiderhoof, is sought in connection with the charges booked against Tarbush.

NEW YORKER CHARGED WITH HIRING WAR FLYER

Eddie Schneider Declares U. S. Attorney Paid Him for Services in Spain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Back from a month of dropping bombs on behalf of the Spanish Loyalist government, Eddie Schneider, Jersey City, N. J., aviator, said today he was signed by a New York lawyer to serve in the Spanish war at $1,500 a month.

Schneider was questioned by Assistant United States Attorney John F. Dailey Jr., who announced he would seek indictments from the federal grand jury next week against several New Yorkers in connection with the enlistment of American aviators for Spanish service, Interviewed as he entered Dailey's office, Schneider said the lawyer negotiated with him for his services and handed him his steamship ticket for transportation to Spain.

The flier said he quit the war to comply with President Roosevelt's neutrality policy.

Schneider said he participated in daily bombing raids in Spain for three weeks.

Dailey said it was unlikely the grand jury would hear testimony from Bert Acosta and Major Gordon Berry, free-lance fliers who returned yesterday from Spain and whom Dailey questioned, but that agencies hiring Americans for Spanish service would be prosecuted "to the limit."

The district attorney said federal agents were investigating the stories told by Acosta and Berry.

CHINESE COMMUNISTS HOLD 21 AMERICANS

American Embassy Counselor, Seeking To Negotiate Release, Is Detained.

SHANGHAI (Saturdoy), Jan. 16. (UP)—The fate of 27 Americans reportedly detained as hostages in Sian-Fu by Shensi province Communist Rebels remained in doubt today.

United States embassy attaches in Nanking had no word from Willys R. Peck, embassy counselor, who flew to Sian yesterday to attempt to arrange the Americans' release.

Some fear was felt that Peck, too, may have been detained. It was pointed out that the men who kidnaped Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Nanking dictator, at Sian last month, still are in control there and would not hesitate to seize anybody who might be useful in guaranteeing them against attack by government bombing planes.

The Chinese central news agency reported that General Mao Tse-tung, chief commander of the Chinese Communist armies, had reached Sian-fu and was supervising organization of the Shensi Communist administration.

Mao, a former newspaperman, has been one of the most rabid of the Communist leaders ever since the split in the Kuomintang revolution in 1927 which resulted in Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's rise to power on an anti-Communist program.

Other advices indicated that the Communists were consolidating their power in Shensi and that half-hearted efforts of Nanking to arrange a peaceful settlement of the revolt were making no headway.

Generalissimo Chiang remained in seclusion at Fenghua, Chekiang province, and apparently was determined to remain aloof until after the meeting of the government's central executive committee in Nanking next month. If the foreign embassies continue pressure, however, it was believed that Chiang may have to return to the capital and hasten a settlement which will at least assure speedy release of Americans and Europeans unable to escape from the troubled areas. Groups of British, Belgian, German, Italian and other nationals are endangered as well as the Americans.

Nanking forces today had completed preparations for a nutcracker movement which can be started at any time an order to advance is given. No attack con be considered, however, until foreigners in the region have been removed. Nanking, too, is loath to attack as long as the rebels hold numbers of its airplanes, artillery and other supplies seized when the rebellion started last month with the kidnaping of Generalissimo Chiang.

The essential situation thus was unchanged.

HOMOSASSA, Fla., Jan. 15.—We swung out from the dock and moved slowly down the river.

Behind us the clubhouse of the Homosassa Fishing Club looked old and warm against the background of the trees with the lawn sloping right down to the river.

There is no other river like this one. It has a greatness about it. It is broad and flat without any ripples or waves. Only when a hard wind blows up from the gulf are there small waves on it. It flows with a strength and a seeming purpose.

It would be a good simile for the River of Life, would this river. It boils up out of the earth and flows 11 miles to the gulf, quickly, powerfully.

The motor gets up the echoes in the forests along the banks. The moss, like long, gray beards, hangs in festoons from the trees. A lone sea gull, hunting inland, swoops and dives.

We go on and finally we are near the place called Hell Gate.

"There is someone fishing there from the bank," said the guide.

There was. It was a small boy, about 11 years old. He wore faded, patched overalls.

THE LAW OF THE GAME.

He was there first. We respected the laws of the game and dropped anchor near the far edge of the pool. We were after red fish. So was he. He used an old-fashioned throw line.

"That boy probably has fished every day of his life," said Mr. Bill Wardlaw.

He asked the boy.

"Do you live here, son?"

"Yes, sir."

"Fish much?"

"I sure do. Most every day."

We got our lines into the edge of the pool. They were not hungry. We waited. The sun wheeled higher and noises of the forests came out. There were the sounds of birds. Far away, coming very fainty, we heard someone calling. A fishing bird screamed. There was no other noise.

At last the boy yelled. "Come to papa, baby," he said.

We could see his line cutting through the water as he played the fish. We watched. His face was lighted with the thrill of the struggle. At last the fish broke water. It was a big red.

At last the boy had him. He got him in and strung him on a stout cord.

"We have traveled 480 miles to fish," said Mr. Bill Wardlaw, "and if we never catch a fish this trip is worth it just to have seen that boy's face when he caught that fish."

I nodded an affirmative head, watching the boy. He was expert with his long line.

"If he fishes here until he is an old man his face will have that look every time he feels the fish's strike and when he knows he has him hooked."

The boy heaved out his line again.

And then they began to strike for us.

THE GOOD DAY.

The days seem good here. One seems scarcely to have put one's head on the pillow before there is a knock at the door. And there is the boy with the tray of fruit juice.

The vitamins are alive and kicking because the fruit was not many minutes from the grove back of the clubhouse when the juice was extracted.

Outside there are curious noises. To one who wakes in a city with the harsh, strident sound of the automobile horns and the sound of traffic outside, it all seems unreal. There is the sound of someone talking at the docks where the boats are. A few ducks quack. Across the river a dog barks. The noonday siesta is best. Before leaving for the morning's fishing an agreement is made as to where lunch will be eaten. And when it comes there is the wood fire and the fish cooking in the pans and the river slipping by.

The coming of dusk on a river seems to have an impressive solemnity about it. It comes rather suddenly. The water changes color. The birds begin to feed. The green of the forest becomes darker.

We take up lines and the motor comes to life. We move up the river. And at last the clubhouse comes to view. It's home.

THE VILLAGE OF HOMOSASSA.

The old village of Homosassa lies immediately across the river. It is a fishing village—depending on the river for existence.

There was an old Indian village there once. No railroad comes there. Life never seems to change much.

Some miles away is the new town. That's where Dazzy Vance, the old speedball pitcher of the Brooklyn club, bought the hotel and tried to make a club of it for baseball fishermen and hunters.

The world is blotted out at night. There are no street lights.

It grows quiet early. And before one knows it it is dawn again and the boy is knocking at the door.

GULDAHL TAKES LEAD WITH 64

OAKLAND, Calif., Jan. 15—(AP)—Ralph Guldahl, lanky Chicago pro, outscored par, the elements and 200 opponents today to set the first round pace of the $5,000 Oakland Open golf tournament with a 64.

His remarkable round, made despite driving rain, sodden fairways and mushy greens, clipped four strokes off the par 34-34—68 Claremont course. The record is 62, held by Dewey Longworth, Clairmont pro.

Out in 31 and home in 33, Guldahl, winner of the last Augusta and Miami tournaments, took a one-stroke lead over young Johnny Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., who shot 35-30—65.

Alexander Enters Hospital--Penniless

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 15. (AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander, one-time star pitcher with the Philadelphia Phillies, Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals, entered a Springfield hospital today, practically penniless and suffering from a complication of diseases.

Dr. Paul Levis said his condition was serious.

Alexander came here with friends a short time after being hurt in an automobile accident. Dr. Levis said that complications and a fall which reopened an old leg injury has left the old-time baseball star with a serious infection.

WALTER SAMS TIES FOR THIRD

PUNTA GORDA, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Young Walter Sams, of Athens, Ga., faltered momentarily today and missed his chance to make a clean sweep in the 10th annual Charlotte Harbor trapshooting tournament. He won three out of four events.

The only first place Sams yielded throughout the three-day shoot was in the doubles event today. R. A. King, of Wichita Falls, Tex., took that one, breaking 92 out of 100 targets while Sams finished in a tie for third at 85.

Before the final competition, a handicap affair, Sams regained his eye and blasted 98 out of 100 for first place. Hunter Walker and Arthur Cuscaden, both of Tampa, divided professional honors. Walker won the doubles, shooting an 83, while Cuscaden took the handicap, winning with a 95.

Second place among the amateurs in the handicap was shared by A. Amman, of Peotone, Ill., and S. Parker, of Kalamazoo, Mich., each having 95. Next in line, at 94, were S. Sharman, Salt Lake City; A. Daino, Coral Gables, Fla.; J. R. Johnston Jr., Hartford City, Ind., and C. C. Plummer, of Flint Flom, Manitoba.

Other professional scores included E. Hines, Tampa, 90; Walke, 88; J. E. Avery, Jacksonville, 66.

Parker took second place in the doubles with an 86. Tied for third with Sams were Sharman and Plummer.

Other amateur handicap scores: G. Hight, Rome, Ga.; J. Stinson, Bradford, Pa., and J. Henagan, Bradenton, Fla., 93; Dr. O. B. Hinz, H. E. White, Sarasota, and King 92; A. Peterson, W. G. Creeson, Middletown, N. Y., 77; I. Andrews, Spartanburg, S. C., 76; Dr. O. B. Sims, Oshkosh, Wis., and G. Hight, Rome, Ga., 72; A. Diano, Coral Gables, Fla., and J. E. Avery, 55.

GRANT TO MEET FRANK PARKER IN SEMI-FINALS

New Jersey Youth and Budge Advance in Tampa Play.

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Donold Budge, America's top-ranking net player, from California, and Frankie Parker, Lawrenceville, N. J., and Milwaukee, second ranking player, joined Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, and Charles Harris, West Palm Beach, in the semi-finals of the annual Dixie tennis tournament with straight-set victories here this afternoon.

Budge rallied after a poor start and blasted Elwood Cooke, of Los Angeles, from the court, 8-6, 6-1, and Parker defeated Walter Senior, of San Francisco, 6-1, 6-3.

Parker had little trouble beating Senior. The top ranker played the best game since the tournament started and ran out the first set after Senior had taken the fifth game.

Parker took a 3-0 lead in the second, but Senior pulled to 4-3 before finally yielding.

Cooke ran up a 5-1 lead on Budge but was unable to hold the margin and finally was beaten. Cooke had set point in the ninth game but Budge made it deuce and pulled up to within a game of Cooke.

Budge evened the score at 5-all, but Cooke pulled ahead again, winning his service to lead, 6-5.

With Budge leading 40-love in the next game, Cooke rallied to deuce, being two points out of set, but was unable to hold the rally and Budge evened the match again at 6-6.

The California redhead then broke through Cooke's service to take the lead for the first time of the set, and followed by winning his own service and the set, 8-6.

Budge continued to improve as the match progressed, taking the first two games of the second set.

Cooke won his service in the third game, but was unable to cope with Budge's brilliant backhand and forehand shots, and lost the next four games in a row, losing the set and match.

The doubles semi-finals, played today, provided the fireworks lacking so far in the singles. After Senior and Parker had eliminated Budge and Hendrix 9-7, 6-4, Grant and Sabin required 44 games to beat Marcum and Cooke. The first set went 18 games and the second 26. The set scores were: 10-8, 14-12.

Grant and Sabin will meet Senior and Parker in the finals Sunday.

$50,000 or Else, Says Diz Dean; He's 26 Today

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Ol' Diz Dean, who'll be 26 tomorrow, departed for Florida and some golf tonight after a few days of business here, leaving behind assertions:

1—That he expects to be in a St. Louis Cardinal uniform again next season, and:

2—That he won't play baseball next season unless he gets a $50,000 contract.

Dizzy (he prefers that to Jerome Herman) insisted that he is staging "no act" with his Cardinal bosses, Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey, declaring "I know that if I don't get the dough this year I never will get it."

The ace St. Louis pitcher, who received $27,500 last season, when he won 24 games and lost 13, said he made between $60,000 and $75,000 from business connections in 1936 and expected to do as well this year.

"As to baseball," he said, "I figure that with me and Lon Warneke pitching the Cardinals will be one or two in the race, fighting it out with the Chicago Cubs. Pittsburgh is my choice for third, with the Giants' old men winding up fourth."

SOUTHEASTERN IS REORGANIZED

MERIDIAN, Miss., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Reorganization of the southeastern baseball league was completed here tonight when Meridian fans, at a meeting attended by representatives of five other cities, posted forfeit money of $1,000 to insure a Meridian franchise.

The six club class B league is composed of Meridian and Jackson, Miss., Selma, Mobile and Montgomery, Ala., and Pensacola, Fla.

Maurice I. Bloch, of Selma, who has been serving as temporary chairman of the league during the reorganization, was elected permanent president. The club heads authorized President Bloch to appoint a league secretary, to be named later, who will be paid a salary not to exceed $1,500.

The league also voted to hold its constitution and by-laws meeting here on January 24.

John C. Moss, who has had many years' experience in baseball, was elected president of the Meridian club.

Down the Alleys

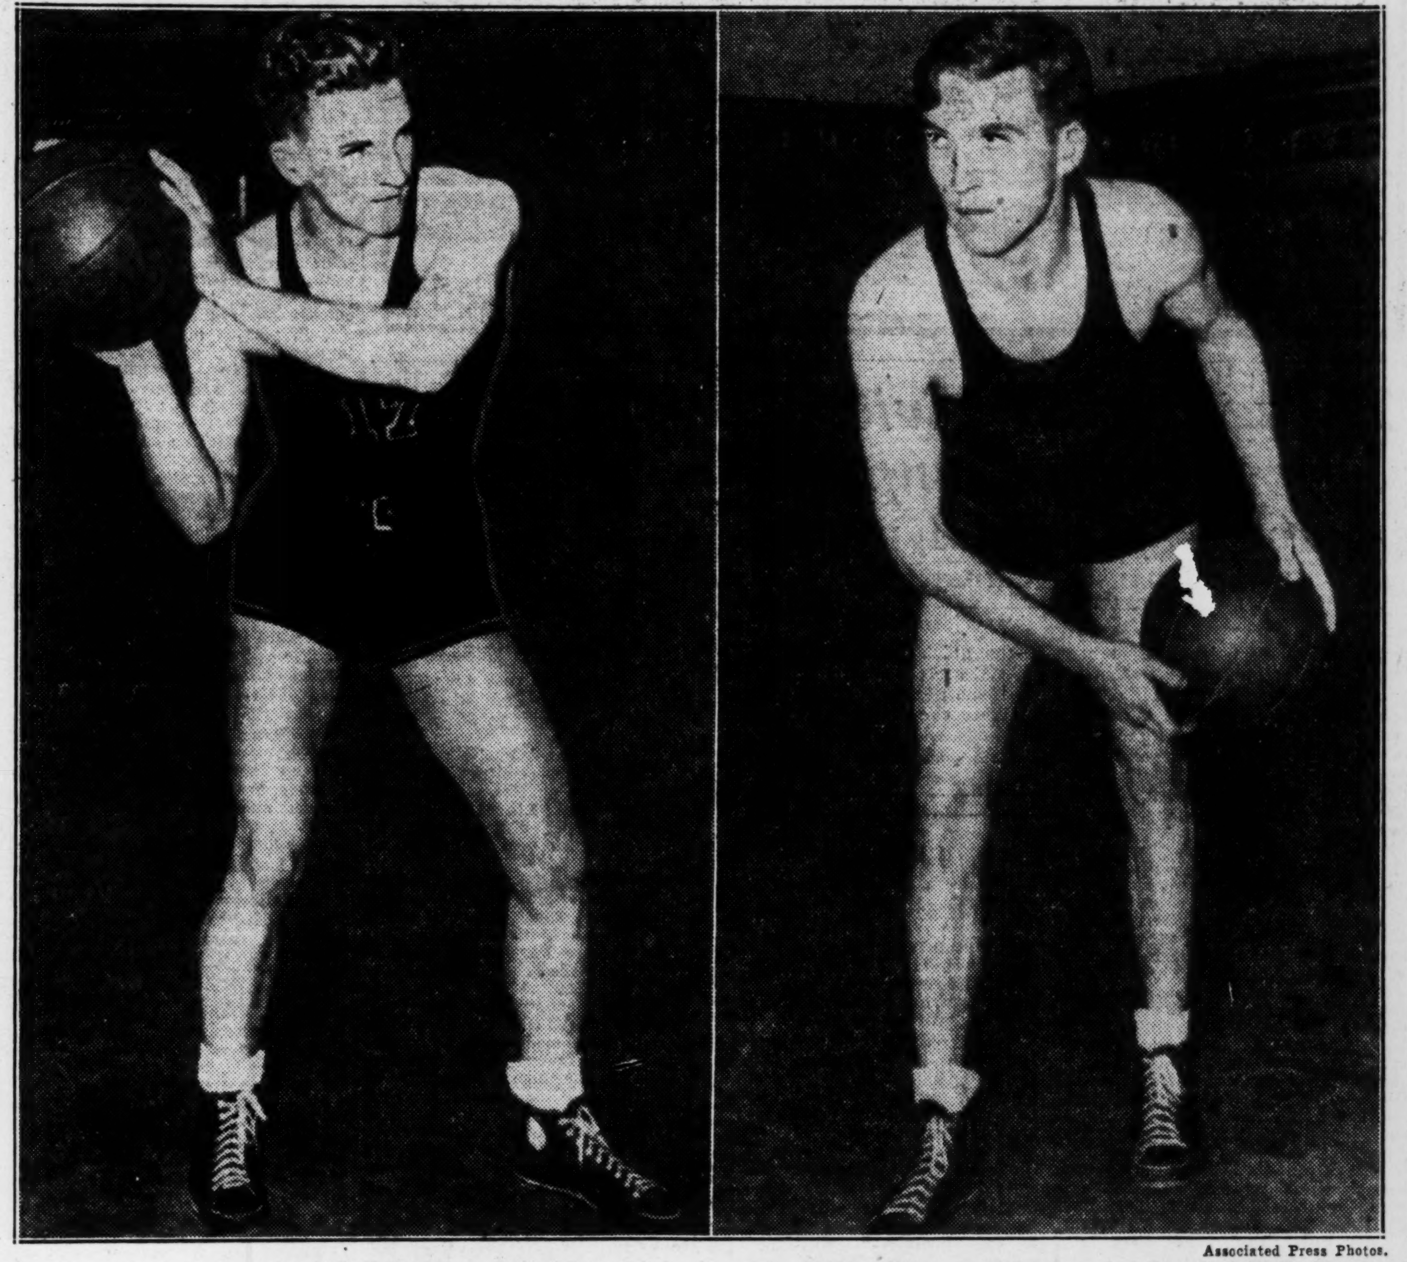
One of the best bowling matches that has been staged in many a day is scheduled to be rolled on the downtown alleys at 7:30 o'clock tonight with the four highest average bowlers of the city participating in the competition.

Walter E. Lawson, No. One ranking bowler of the city, will be paired with George W. McKay, who recently won the fifteen game All-Florida Sweepstakes with a total of 1,937. They will compete against the formidable team of A. J. Sossong and Carl Tidwell, Southern Individual champion, both of whom are top rank pin maulers.

A special sweepstakes is scheduled for the bowlers on the downtown alleys at 7:30 o'clock tonight, with three prizes each to be given in the men and women's events.

The ladies bowl but three games and pay only game cost as they compete for a ten dollar dress, pair of shoes and a hat. The men shoot for cash awards of $10, $3 and $2 as they roll five games. Handicaps apply in both events on the usual two-thirds basis.

Commodore Stars Tech Will Have To Watch Here Tonight



Associated Press Photos.

Kenneth Overly, left, Commodore guard or forward—he played the latter position under Josh Cody—and David Coleman, star forward, will bear watching when Vandy and Tech square off tonight at the naval armory. Overly, called "K O" by his teammates, was said by Cody to be almost mechanically perfect as a player. Jim Buford, now coaching the Commodores, likes the get up and go of both players. Coleman is a reckless type of player who always keeps the opposing guards guessing. Tonight's game, first conference contest at home for Tech, begins at 8 o'clock.

Weight Lifters Meet At Y.M.C.A. Tonight

Mid-South Championships Likely To Produce Several New Records.

With a few more entries received yesterday, the mid-south weightlifting championships to be held tonight at the Y. M. C. A. looks like the biggest weight-lifting show ever held in the south.

Karo Whitfield, chairman Southeastern A. A. U. Weightlifting committee, says that he expects some new records in this year's meet, as quite a few of the lifters have been breaking records in practice. Leon Greene of Chattanooga, and Peter Fox of Athens, Ga., are expected to break one or two records during the night's lifting.

The three lifts to be contested are the two hands military press, the two hands snatch, two hands clean and jerk. The lifter making the highest total on these three lifts wins in his body weight class, there being eight classes. Gold, silver, bronze medals will be given the first, second, third place winners in each class. Also a trophy will be given to the outstanding lifter of the meet.

Robert Fleming, of Birmingham, Ala., will try for a record in the prone press. And Bob Lintz of Conley, Ga., will give an exhibition in muscle control.

'Stu' Martin Better, Listens to Radio

SUFFOLK, Va., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Stewart "Stu" Martin, St. Louis Cardinals' second baseman, "gravely" ill with an abscessed appendix here, insisted tonight that nurses leave the radio going so he might hear broadcasts of his condition.

"I heard it four times this afternoon and tonight," he told a nurse.

Visitors are forbidden but messages from baseball players identified by Martin as "amateur" friends poured into the Lakeview hospital.

Dr. Ryland, club physician of the Cardinals, made a telephone call from St. Louis inquiring as to his condition. Martin was one of major league baseball's outstanding rookies in 1936.

North Avenue Girls Open Card Tonight

North Avenue Presbyterian will open its 1937 basketball schedule at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Y. W. C. A. court with Druid Hills High as opponents.

It will be the first of 16 games already arranged with several more yet to be scheduled.

A tentative varsity squad of 14 players has been named by Coach Dorothy Fugitt and it is likely that every varsity member will get into the game this afternoon.

TO RACE YACHTS.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Thomas Octave Murdoch Sopwith said today he will race his two yachts, the Endeavour I and Endeavour II, at Newport, R. I., in June to determine which he will enter as England's contender for the America's cup July 31.

BULLDOGS WIN ON FREE THROW

Thompson's Foul, With 2 Seconds To Go, Beats 'Gators, 31-30.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Jan. 15.—(AP) Thompson's free throw with but two seconds left to play, gave the Georgia basketball team a 31-to-30 decision over Florida tonight in a fast, rough and tumble game.

Off to an early lead, Florida was jogging along with a 21-to-16 advantage at the half.

Then Georgia got started. The 'Gators accepted the challenge and both quintets went into high. The gallery was a madhouse.

Twice in the final period the score was tied. Farren, Bulldog center, sank a field goal to pull Georgia even for the first time. Harman followed up with a looping shot and the Georgians went into the lead.

Captain Floyd Christian, Florida guard, and Thompson tied for individual honors with 10 points each.

McCarthy, Carpenter Sign Giant Contracts

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The New York Giants today signed First Baseman Johnny McCarthy and Rookie Outfielder Paul Carpenter to 1937 contracts.

McCarthy, who batted .274 for the Newark club in the International league last season, is scheduled to take the aging and crippled Bill Terry's place at first base next season.

Carpenter, whose home is in Norwalk, Conn., batted .287 for the Greenwood (Miss.) team last season. He will probably be assigned to the Giants' International league farm in Jersey City.

SAME FIVE USED AGAINST FLORIDA WILL OPEN GAME

Both Teams Unbeaten; Jackets Seek Second Conference Win.

VANDY	Pos.	TECH
Coleman	F.	E. Jones
Rymer	F.	Jordan
Hunter	C.	Johnston
Overly	G.	Sims
Field	G.	Boulware

By Jack Troy.

Tech's second conference basketball game and the first one on the home court will be played tonight at the Naval armory with Vanderbilt's Commodores furnishing the opposition.

The Jackets opened their conference season with a 35-25 victory over Florida. Vandy turned back Sewanee, 46 to 26, in its first conference start.

And so the teams meet tonight with unblemished records, and with Tech as the ruling favorite. The Jackets are figured to have too much all-around strength for the Commodores.

However, Coach Roy Mundorff will not subscribe to this belief. He points out that the Jackets made only one goal from out on the floor at Gainesville.

NOT PLEASED.

"We had plenty of chances, but the shots wouldn't drop. We made all our points, except two, from close in. I was not at all pleased with the way we looked, even though we won."

Coach Mundorff is planning to use the same combination that beat Florida. It will include Ed Jones and Bill Jordan, forwards; Bo Johnston, center, and Fletcher Sims and Burtz Boulware, guards.

Tech made only one substitution against Florida. Whack Hyder relieved Burtz Boulware at guard. The Jacket starting combination apparently was functioning to suit all concerned, unless it was Florida, or else there would have been more changes made.

The fans will remember the last Vandy-Tech basketball game here. It was played at the A. A. C. on account of the Naval armory being in use for a dance that night.

THRILLER LAST YEAR.

Tech and Vandy engaged in a virtual free-for-all for 40 minutes, with the Commodores, then coached by Josh Cody, finally winning, 42 to 40. It was a red hot game.

The game tonight, starting at 8 o'clock, is expected to be fashioned along similar lines, except that Tech should be given a bit of an edge in the final analysis.

Coach Jim Buford's five probably profited by the Chattanooga game which they won on a last-minute rally.

Apparently, the Commodores are capable of putting on a whirlwind attack, for they scored seven points in the last two minutes of play against Chattanooga.

PLASMAN MISSING.

Dick Plasman will not be with the Commodores on account of having signed a pro football contract just before the cage season started. He was one of the leaders in last year's game here.

The Amazing Flexible, Nailess Shoes That Need No Breaking In

"They give my feet an amazing new feeling of freedom and comfort." That's the sort of statement we've been hearing regularly from scores of Osteo-path-ik wearers. The revolutionary principle of flexible construction (plus proper support) accounts for that. And our interesting collection of styles proves that it's a smart shoe as well.

Berg, Cothran and Hicks Leading With 80's

DOROTHY KIRBY IN SECOND SPOT WITH 83 IN RAIN

Atlanta Girl Well Ahead of Rest of Field at Augusta.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Despite a water-soaked course, three of the country's foremost women golfers fired steady golf today to tie for the lead in the opening round of the Augusta Country Club's 54-hole medal play title holders' tournament.

Patty Berg, Minneapolis girl star; Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., and Helen Hicks, Woodmere, Long Island, shared the lead with scores of 80, one stroke over women's par, for the first 18 holes.

Miss Berg, runner-up to Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare in the 1936 national, went out over par for a 40 on the outgoing nine and came home with a regulation 40 to start the low scoring.

After a shaky start when she took 42 on the first nine, Miss Cothran, a semi-finalist in the last women's national, posted a 38, two under par, in a brilliant comeback.

PARS FIRST NINE.

Miss Hicks, 1931 national women's champion, parred the first nine but went one over on the second.

The rain which started early this morning and delayed the start until mid-afternoon, had a disastrous effect on the game of some of the other kingpins of feminine golf.

Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., 1936 winner of the titleholders' meet, fared badly, posting an 89.

The Atlanta school girl, Dorothy Kirby, was far ahead of the remainder of the field for fourth place with 83. The present Georgia state champion and twice holder of the title, went out in 42 and toured the second nine in 41.

DIDRIKSON FLOPS.

Babe Didrikson, Beaumont, Texas, athlete, found the going tough from the start, taking 43 for the first nine and blowing herself to a 47 coming in, for a score of 90.

Behind Miss Kirby, Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., was in third place with Helen Dettweiler, Baltimore, and Isabell Ogilvie, Augusta, with 86's.

Helen Waring, Pinehurst, N. C., former north and south champion, held fourth place alone with 87.

PURPLES BEATEN BY SPARTANBURG

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Jan. 15.—Boys' High, of Atlanta, fought desperately in the last minute of play to overcome a three-point lead, but fell one point short here tonight as Spartanburg High school's basketball quintet emerged with a 24-23 triumph in a game in which neither side was ever ahead more than five points. A foul called on Captain Stanley Lancaster, of Spartanburg, as the final gong sounded, gave Hyman Gershon, Boys' High forward, two free throws as the game ended and the little Atlantan made both of them good to cut down Spartanburg's three-point advantage to one.

The score was tied at 15-all as the teams went into the final quarter and with two minutes to go, the Purples were out in front by two points, but the Spartans surged back to make the count 24-21 just before Lancaster fouled Gershon in the act of shooting for a field goal as the timekeeper sounded the bell.

Captain Bob Smith and Gershon played the best offensively for the Purples, while the work of Amos Roberts and Bill Teague stood out on defense.

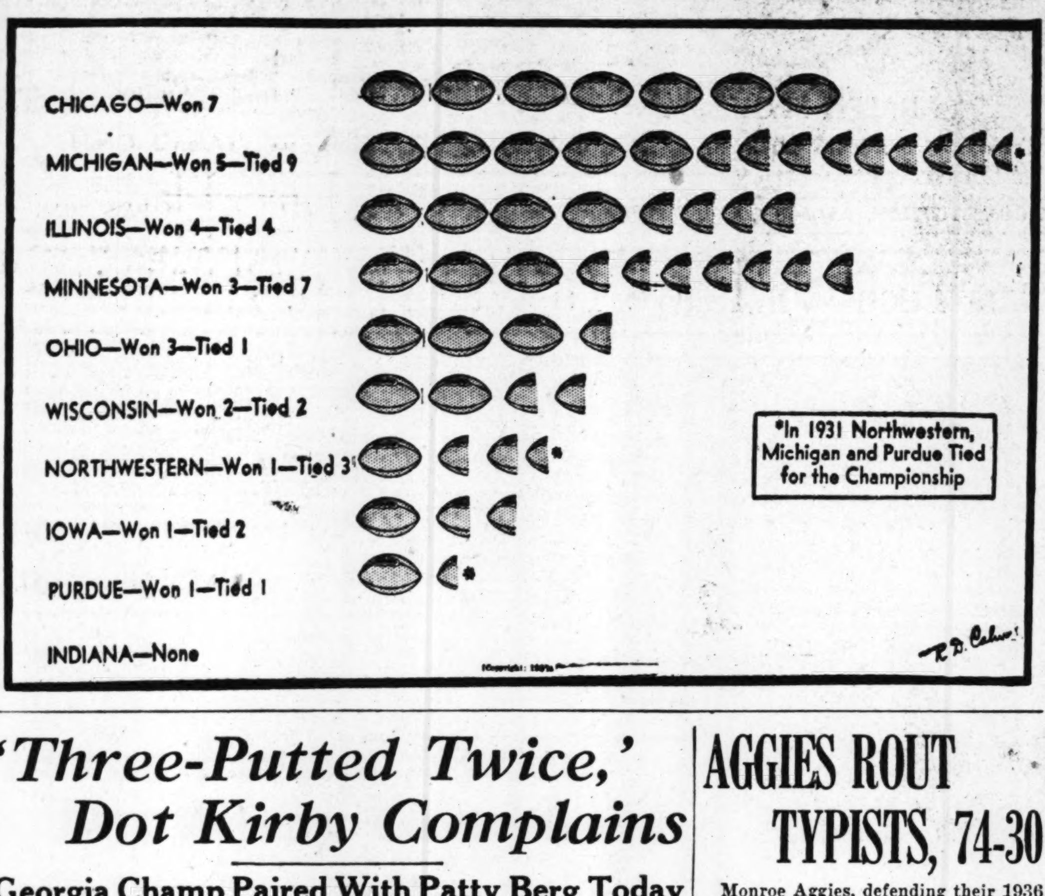
Michigan Leads in Big Ten Grid Titles



'Three-Putted Twice,' Dot Kirby Complains

Georgia Champ Paired With Patty Berg Today in Augusta Tourney.

By Dorothy Kirby.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 15.—I bragged too quick about the sunshine down here, because it rained all afternoon, and made it a terrible day for golf. But, despite the weather, Patty Berg, Helen Hicks and Jane Cothran tied for low score with 80's, which was mighty good on a day like this. I wound up with an 83. I three-putted two holes which messed my score up. It was an awful struggle and, boy, was I glad to see that last ball drop in the cup on 18!

They said it's gotten to be a habit for it to rain every time they have a tournament here.

I was told today that the best way to keep it from raining down here during a tournament is to take out rain insurance. During a three-day tournament they had not long ago one of the members on the tournament committee took out some insurance and, sure enough, it didn't rain. The poor man was hoping that it would rain just for an hour so he would get paid off. But going back to today's play, Jane Cothran had rather a big day, for she won the putting contest this morning and tied for low this afternoon. Jane started off this afternoon saying she had lost her putting touch, but evidently she found it. Babe Didrikson blew up and wound up with a ninety. Kathryn Hemphill took eighty-six strokes but she said her putting caused all the trouble, for she three-putted a good many greens.

I am paired with Patty Berg tomorrow and we go off second.

I hope the weather will be better tomorrow, but from the looks of things now there's not much hope. I am going to take in a buffet supper that is being given for the golfers tonight, So I guess I had better be getting ready.

Earl Mann Back From Tour Today

President Earl Mann returns today from an inspection tour of training camp sites in Florida and Mississippi. He may have an announcement to make.

Then, too, President Mann and Pitcher Emil Leonard will go into a conference, with a doctor as the third party in the ring, to decide whether or not Leonard's appendix must come out. Leonard has been here for a couple of days awaiting Mann's return.

President Mann next week will devote considerable thought to the appointment of a successor to Johnny Shores, who recently resigned as club trainer.

Mercer Bears Defeat Albany Blues, 38-31

MACON, Ga., Jan. 15.—(AP)—Mercer withstood a whirlwind rally by the Albany Blues tonight and triumphed, 38 to 31, before a crowd of 2,000 roaring fans.

AGGIES ROUT TYPISTS, 74-30

Monroe Aggies, defending their 1936 Big Seven basketball championship, went into lead for 1937 honors with a 70-to-30 victory over Commercial High, Friday afternoon on the Fulton High court. It was the second straight win for Coach Dean's Monroe Aggies, with no defeats.

Monroe gained a 16-to-4 advantage in the first 10 minutes of play and increased the margin to 33 to 16 as the half ended.

Playing a great defensive game, the Aggies held Commercial to four points during the third quarter and increased their own lead to 54 to 20, after which the reserves took up the burden and coasted during the last 10 minutes of play.

Ralph Hyder, a brother of the Tech star, led the attack with 18 points. He was given some valuable assistance by Murphy with 11 points, Garner, Gaston and Farmer. Mitchell, a rangy forward, led the Aggie reserves with nine points.

Stone was outstanding for Commercial, scoring 17 of the 30 points. His goals were made from all ranges of the court. Long shooting was featured during the game with both teams making many of their points from beyond the foul line.

Monroe's tall team, with Garner measuring six foot seven inches, was an overmatch for the small Commercial players, as many of the stray shots were made good on the rebound by following the ball.

Y VOLLEY BALL TOURNEY OPENS

Six teams are definitely entered in the southeastern invitation volleyball tournament to be held at the Central "Y" gym today. Late entrants were likely.

The first match will bring the two Atlanta entries into battle, the "Y" and the Atlanta Athletic Club. This match will begin at 3 o'clock and games will follow until around midnight.

Bobby Dodd, backfield coach at Georgia Tech, heads the list of the A. A. C. volley men whom Coach Joe Bean will enter. Dodd is considered a professional among the ranks of the valleyball amateurs on account of his coaching position, but is allowed to play since this is an invitational affair and not a championship.

The local "Y" team will be led by Captain Cliff Lowry and W. L. Turley. These two men are two of the deadliest spikers in the south. Other "Y" players are Wells Alexander, Tom Bryan, Roy Harwell, E. D. Hutchinson, Harold Ingoe, Roy Owen, B. K. Teney and Marcus Yonn.

Knoxville "Y" will be favored to repeat their win of last year, although the opposition will be stronger. Dr. Joseph T. Smith is coach of the Knoxville team and is a member of the All-American team. Jay Ledgerwood, the red-headed, is considered the greatest spiker in the south today and one of the greatest in the nation. Allen Ware, Earl Marsh, George McNutt Jr., Dr. J. M. Steckman, Ralph Radcliffe and Dr. R. F. Thomason complete the roster of the southern "Y" and southeastern champs.

1936 CRIPPLES IN BIG LEAGUES LOSE CRUTCHES

Only Stu Martin, Paul Dean, Delancey, Terry Not in Shape.

By Scotty Reston.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The 1936 major league cripples, miraculously revived by the thought of receiving 1937 contracts, have suddenly tossed away their crutches.

Twelve of the 16 clubs had at least one key man out late last season, but an Associated Press poll today revealed that only Infielder Stu Martin, Pitcher Paul Dean, Catcher Bill Delancey, of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, have not returned to playing condition.

Manager Frankie Frisch was concerned deeply over the illness of Martin, in grave condition with an abscessed appendix in Suffolk, Va.

Martin started in great shape last year, but fell ill. He was subsequently benched with an injured leg. Frisch, playing his 18th year in the majors, had to fill the gap.

FRISCH, BY GOLLY.

Asked who would take Martin's place, Frisch replied: "What's wrong with Frisch?" He expressed the hope however Martin would recover and take over the job.

Meanwhile, Cardinal officials reported Bill Delancey is definitely lost again this season. They said they "have no information whether Paul Dean has definitely overcome the sore arm which bothered him last year."

Elsewhere, however, players were optimistic. Manager Mickey Cochrane, of the Detroit Tigers, predicted "I'll catch 100 games." He vouched for First Baseman Hank Greenberg's statement that his broken wrist is all right again.

INDIANS WELL.

Campbell was stricken twice with spinal meningitis. Pytlak's jaw was broken in a game against the New York Yankees last August 2. Harder was troubled with rheumatism in his shoulder. Kardow, promising rookie pitcher, was in an auto accident last Thanksgiving Day.

Clark Griffith, of the Senators, is convinced Charles (Buddy) Myer, 1935 American league batting champion, who was out most of last season with a stomach ailment, is ready for another great season.

Hagen Defeats Big Karl Davis As Speer Helps

By Thad Holt.

Old man fate, or young Mr. Chance, or Miss Opportunity evened the score with Karl Davis over at the Atlanta theater last night. Or maybe it was Promoter Frank Speer, doing a turn of refereeing, who actually brought it about. Yeah, that's it. It was Frank Speer. He's the guilty character of this stirring mat chapter.

Get the picture if you will. 'Tis the third fall. Davis and George Hagen, who lost on a freakish finish to the Ohioan last week, have one of the season's largest turnouts doing somersaults and handsprings out in the aisles and they wage a thrilling, spectacular match.

DAVIS ATTACKS.

Then suddenly, Davis, who has done nothing Speer has asked of him all night, storms Hagen into the ropes and won't let go. Speer, almost exhausted and realizing Davis has no understanding of the word "break," gives a mighty tug of the rope strand. The force is so great the two men shoot toward the mat like cocoanuts from a tree. Hagen is on top. And he stays there until Davis is counted out.

The crowd, a Hagen crowd, is delighted. Davis wishes he were dead. Or at least he looked that way.

SCIENCE.

They did a lot of wrestling last night, these two, and it was a standout match. The first fall went to Davis with a leg strangle in 18 minutes. Hagen's flying scissors, employed with a whippish effect, evened it in 12. The last fall required five minutes.

Milo Steinborn called upon his power to take two falls against Sun Jennings' one in the semi-final. Jenning's death lock got the first fall. He connected with it in the third, but Milo converted it into his favored bear hug. Milo won the second fall with a hug, which is hardly the kind one uses to express affection.

George (Sully) Harben, of Chamblee, Ga., tossed Jimmy Morris, of Memphis, in the opener, a fast match that went 14 1-2 minutes.

Campus Club Wins Emory Touch Event

A long pass over the goal line gave the Campus Club a 6-0 victory over Chi Phi in the finals of the Interorganization touch football tourney at Emory University.

The game was played to determine the league champions, after the two groups had previously battled to a scoreless deadlock.

Atlanta Boy Swims For Rutgers Team

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 15.—Henry Heinz, of Atlanta, will swim the 100-yard backstroke for the varsity swimming team of the Rutgers Preparatory school during the coming season, it was announced by the coach today.

RED SOX ADMIT THEY MUST USE TALENT IN FOLD

But Owner Yawkey Says Offers Made 3 Clubs Still Hold.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Jan. 15.—(UP)—Boston's Red Sox have no trades "in sight," but President Tom Yawkey admitted last night that offers made to three other American league clubs still hold.

It had been generally believed the Sox would announce acquisition of a hard-hitting, right-handed outfielder when Manager Joe Cronin arrived from his San Francisco home. Cronin arrived. But there was no announcement.

"We have no trades in sight," Cronin said at a luncheon to local baseball writers. "It looks as if we'll have to get along with what we've got."

Yawkey himself said "there is nothing to announce." Later, however, the youthful Sox owner told the United Press:

"At the major league meeting last month, we made offers to Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit. I believe our propositions were equitable, but there have been no developments. Of course, I'm anxious to build a pennant-winner and our offers still hold. The next move, however, is up to those clubs."

It is generally known that the Red Sox have sought either Joe Vosmik from Cleveland or Moose Solters from the St. Louis Browns. It was believed the dicker with Detroit also concerned an outfielder, possibly Pete Fox.

Further indication that a deal still is in the fire was seen in the fact that Yawkey, Cronin, General Manager Eddie Collins and Billy Evans, head of the Fox farm system, conferred in New York two days then transferred their confab here.

RESPONSIBILITY FIXED BY PUBLIC WORKS BODY

The committee, of which Councilman George Lyle is chairman, also pledged to co-operate with department heads in eliminating "drunks" from the pay rolls, and declared it would back them up in hiring and firing personnel.

It was also announced the committee will begin a drive to keep streets clear of obstructions, including advertising banners.

FARM GROUP SUBMITS PRODUCTION LOAN BILL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The house agriculture committee started a $50,000,000 farm crop production loan bill on its legislative road today, but in doing so it called attention to the existence of overlapping agricultural credit agencies.

The bill, which would set up a permanent revolving fund for loans up to $400 annually to farmers unable to get credit elsewhere, was recommended for passage. Under expired loan laws, the maximum available was $200 per borrower.

Representative Jones, Democrat, Texas, chairman of the committee, pointed out at a hearing on the measure that two agencies—the Farm Credit Administration and the Resettlement Administration — were attempting to serve farmers unable to obtain private credit.

Powell Wondering If He Really Is Dead

"Maybe there's some truth in them and my friends just haven't got courage to tell me," he said today.

Reports that Powell was dead began circulating Saturday night.

"And I'm still getting calls—wether my wife (Joan Blondell) is. Naturally no one would ask to talk to me," Powell said.

It is true, he added, that he recently sustained two injuries—a blister on his heel and a sore thumb.

"I don't think my condition is critical, though. I've got a fighting chance for life," he said.

NUMBER 304—You are particular about your home life and have great pride in a neat, tidy home. You have always pictured a rather elaborate home, and there is no reason why you should not make this dream come true by application and diligence. Look for a chance to get away for a little while from the daily grind through the medium of a long trip. It will refresh you.

NUMBER 409—It seems that you have dreams and are sometimes depressed by them. If you will study the science of dreams, you will usually find the omen is for good rather than a warning. You should receive some benefit through new friends or fraternal organizations.

NUMBER 805—You are truthful and sincere in your relationships regarding friendships and love, and you stick to your friends through thick and thin. Be certain that you select the right friends. Light and frivolous things do not interest you. You are more inclined towards intellectual amusements and pastimes. You are a charming host or hostess and have the happy faculty of making everyone around you feel at home.

NUMBER 503—You always maintain a hopeful outlook towards the future, and you have the opportunity of really accomplishing something big through utilizing your undeveloped talents. You like travel and the indications are that you will travel a great deal during your life. Plan ahead. The indications are that things will "break" for you.

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

The more calories you can reduce on the better you will look and feel. That "reduced" look is never lovely. A drawn expression following an unnatural loss in weight means that you have been taking less than enough food to cover your basic requirements. No wonder you look all worn out!

Wrinkling and strain are due to starvation which has drained your vitality, rather than to the removal of excess fat from the face. The average reducer goes about this business from exactly the wrong angle. She uses as few calories and takes as little exercise as possible. If you would reduce on a liberal calorie allowance and back this with exercise to improve your appearance, you would not only bring your figure down to normal but your health up to par.

I cannot overemphasize the cost of the starvation method of reducing, to your looks—to say nothing of your health. You lose your animated expression, your color and the smooth texture of your skin, but on a scientific plan you can grow slim beautifully. Isn't it worth while to be sensible?

To lose weight on an adequate amount of food requires two things: Consistent exercise and sufficient time to reduce. You must take enough calories to feel well, and enough exercise to burn calories.

At one time or another, you may have "dieted" unwisely. For example, if you have a cup of black coffee for breakfast; fruit salad, a soda cracker, and tea for lunch; and a lamb chop, spinach, grapefruit and coffee at night, you are getting about 400 calories for the day. As a minimum, the reducer needs 1,000 calories a day, and to make up the deficit created by a 400-calorie diet you draw on your reserve to an extent that is weakening, and, if continued, dangerous.

To diet unwisely is weakening. Use calories to balance energy.

Furthermore, on such a skimpy menu, you cannot get the protein, minerals and vitamins which supply health and protect your beauty. The sad part of it all is that you do lose weight, but you do not experience all at once the completely devastating effect of such a program. Gradually it dawns on you that you are fatigued most of the time, your disposition is in shreds, and you are not very happy about your looks, in spite of slimness.

You may think the daily menus are too conservative to be slimming, but on these menus you can lose from one to two pounds a week. You will not lower your resistance to colds, and you will feel better when you get down to normal weight than you did in your overly plump days.

It is only the people who have dieted radically who give reducing its bad reputation. Normal weight means health, but the method determines the result.

My Day
By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—Yesterday afternoon the Egyptian minister came to bring me a gift from the first factory which has been opened in Egypt. They have always imported their linen and cotton material, and for the first time they are actually making linen and cotton articles. When one realizes how much cotton is grown there, it seems almost incredible that they have had no factory before for its manufacture into articles of everyday use.

We were alone at dinner except for some friends of Franklin Jr.'s, and I worked until fairly late while the boys enjoyed a movie.

This morning I set off to drive myself to the district jail. I was driving a new car for the first time, and my brother insisted on going with me, as he evidently distrusted my ability to understand its mechanics. So he also had to go through the jail. On coming out, his comment was: "In Birmingham, Mich., they have a modern one that has this one beaten a mile."

It wouldn't be at all difficult to beat this one in a great many ways. Except for very able administration, it might very easily be a breeding place for crime. The food seems to be excellent for the money spent. The jail is clean and as well ventilated as it possibly can be considering its construction. This could be ameliorated by the use of modern ventilation fans.

I think if I were the warden I would be saying a prayer every night for an addition where I could segregate the young offenders and have sufficient space for a modern hospital and appropriation enough to allow for adequate medical examination of everyone who is taken in, as well as a safe place to care for them while ill.

District jails throughout the country are probably where communities should begin to familiarize themselves with the crime situation and what they, as communities, can do to improve it. These are the least known institutions, very rarely visited, and yet they are the nearest prisons which people might see.

I hold no brief for individuals who visit public institutions as a mere matter of curiosity, but I think every citizen should familiarize himself with all the institutions of government in his vicinity. As a taxpayer, he is responsible for their support, and for the way in which they are run, and in the course of his survey he may find something really valuable that he, as an individual, can do.

The mere sight of the barred windows and doors, the thought of what nights must be with all that closely packed humanity thinking no very happy thoughts, makes me shiver as I go in, and I breathe a prayer of gratitude as I come out again into the air and sun, free.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL
By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

A bachelor who has been twice unlucky in love asks: "What are the girls looking for anyhow? If you know the answer to that one give it to us."

Simply enough the girls are looking for men to love. According to one woman who has recently written a fat volume about her wholesale dealing in men friends, lovers and husbands, "It is astonishing how hard it is to find someone to love."

The real young girl is looking for a good time—that's her idea of love. She will accept no substitute for the guy who can furnish the good time and enjoy it with her. The youngish girl is looking for romance. She can weave her own and will hang it on the neck of the first man that presents himself, if he will "give her a look that can be poured on a waffle" and some syruppy sentiments to go along with it. The oldish girl is looking for a home. She will compromise with her ideals of the perfect mate if the prospect promises four walls and the security that is supposed to be inside. The widow is looking for companionship. Any man that will talk to her, listen to her talk, break the silence of loneliness, is in the running for her hand. Yes, all the girls, old and young, are looking for someone to love and most of them have marriage in the back of their heads. The fact that "he" is hard to find doesn't keep them from looking and the fact that they cannot find what they seek, doesn't keep them from leaping into wedlock.

Surely any man can find a wife in one of these four classes and when he has found her—then his troubles begins. The world's highest paid editor says every woman thinks she wants a master and every man thinks he wants a slave but when the tale is finally told the wife is usually the master and the husband the slave. Funny, if true, and there's certainly some truth in it.

Be she weak or strong, a woman wants to look up to her husband. She prefers that he be man enough to take charge and run the works, yet she adores to have him delegate the job to her. Ideally he must be able to make a living; work, produce, pay the bills. It isn't that she puts a big premium on ease and luxury but that she puts a big premium on the dignity of her marriage which hardly exists if the man is not providing for his family. You see the man who works and can't make a living is a pitiable object. The man who loafs and refuses to work is a contemptible object. The man who has the wherewithal but won't spend it, is as mean as gouge. None of them fires her fancy, appeals to her pride or promises her happiness for the future. If she has any gumption or any knowledge of human nature she won't be caught in a trap with any of these.

Every wife expects her husband to confide in her, defer to her, voice his approval of her, make her his partner in every phase of his life. She would have him accept her family and her friends so that marriage doesn't change the channel of her life but deepens it and widens it and lets it flow smoothly and freely.

We all know what the girls are looking for: love, husbands, homes, happiness. The bachelor tasks should be easy for even though he can't guarantee all these blessings, the girls are easily fooled.

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

A sick person is apt to have a setback when some dear friend settles down for an afternoon's visit.

It must have been from Elsie Dinsmore or from Pollyanna that most of us picked up our idea of how to make hospital calls. You go in, and you take out your sewing or your knitting, and then you settle down to cheer up the patient for the entire morning or the entire afternoon.

Well, Pollyanna, or Elsie, or whoever it was, didn't do right by us. We've heard now, from a number of hospital patients, that there's nothing more discouraging than to see some dear friend settle down for the afternoon. When you're sick, it seems, you like to have company. But you don't have the stamina to bear up under a whole afternoon of it, no matter how well you're getting along. And what's more, most good convalescents are usually pretty pleased with having a good chance to get their year's reading done, and too many interruptions annoy them.

So if you are a cheerful sick bed visitor, you'd better put your ring on your other hand when you enter the patient's room, and remember to leave as soon as the ring begins to feel funny.

And you might try to persuade yourself, too, that you're not an exception to the rule. But perhaps that's too much to ask.

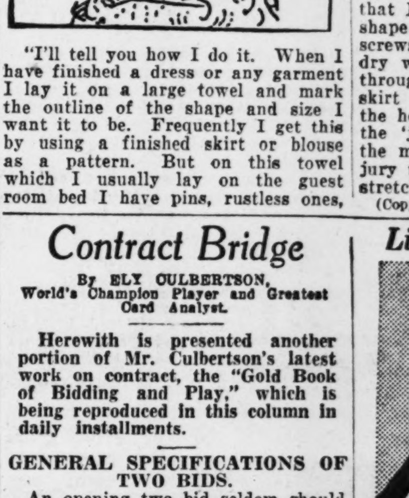
NANCY PAGE
The Trick of Fitting Lies in the Blocking
Fy FLORENCE La GANKE

The club members were listening to a most interesting paper. The speaker had her facts well in hand and referred to her notes only occasionally. Most of the members let their knitting and handwork with which they usually occupied themselves at club meetings remain untouched during the reading of the paper and the discussion that followed it.

Later they picked up their work and the question that seemed to arouse most interest centered around the blocking of finished garments.



"I'll tell you how I do it. When I have finished a dress or any garment I lay it on a large towel and mark the outline of the shape and size I want it to be. Frequently I get this by using a finished skirt or blouse as a pattern. But on this towel which I usually lay on the guest room bed I have pins, rustless ones, outlining the shape. Then I wash the garment in lukewarm suds water. I have plenty of well dissolved soap flakes in the water, I squeeze the garment and cup it so that the suds are washed through and through it. Then I lift it from the suds and fill the bowl with lukewarm water of the same temperature as the original soap water. I do this three times, never wringing the garment but patting and squeezing it. Then I insert a thick bath towel inside the garment. I roll this in another towel and when I get the garment completely covered with the towel I pat and squeeze for five minutes.

"At the end of this time the garment is almost dry. I remove it from the wet towel which is inside it and also from the outer towel. I lay it on the bed and make it conform to the pinned outline on that towel. I insert the pins in the garment one by one, fastening them down to the background towel. Then I put another towel on top of the garment. Over this I lay heavy quilts. Frequently I put on a few hooked rugs that I have. This weight presses the garment. It is left here to dry for 24 hours. Then it is unpinned and with a warm iron I am able to press hems or surfaces that were doubled. I have a fresh, clean garment that is just the right size. When I want to do the blocking more quickly I slip the skirt onto one of those commercial forms that I have made the right size and shape by means of the adjustable screws. This garment is stood up to dry where currents of air will pass through it and in almost no time the skirt is dry. Pressing takes care of the hem. I like the squeezing inside the 'jelly roll' towel since most of the moisture is removed without injury to the yarn when it is wet and stretches easily."

Contract Bridge
By ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Herewith is presented another portion of Mr. Culbertson's latest work on contract, the "Gold Book of Bidding and Play," which is being reproduced in this column in daily installments.

GENERAL SPECIFICATIONS OF TWO BIDS.

An opening two bid seldom should be even considered unless the hand contains more than five honor tricks distributed among three suits, and is not more than one trick short of a certain game even with a blank in partner's hand. Experts who require that a two bid absolutely guarantee a game, place the requirements so high as virtually to drive the two bid out of circulation. It is better to lose, rarely, by making a two bid, than to miss splendid opportunities for more precise slam bidding, not to speak of the numerous games retrieved.

It must be remembered that one bids are not kept open if the responder holds only a couple of queens, and many hands require only that type of support for a laydown game.

TODAY'S HAND.

In some hands, an expert can prophesy at the first trick exactly what will happen at the end of the hand.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 heart	2 spades	3 clubs	3 spades
Pass	4 spades	Pass	Pass
Pass

East's bid was rather light, as was West's three-club overcall. West opened the king of clubs, and the declarer took stock of his resources. He counted four apparently certain losers: Two clubs, one diamond, and one heart. Patently, the crux was to avoid one of these losers. Declarer carefully considered the bidding. With all the aces and one king in sight in his own hand and dummy, and with the king-queen of clubs accounted for by West's opening lead, it appeared certain that East was marked with the king-queen of hearts and the king-queen of diamonds to even partly justify his opening bid. If that condition obtained, declarer saw a ray of hope. At any rate, no other plan offered itself. So West was allowed to hold the club king. East had signaled with the ten-spot and, therefore, West continued with the queen. This declarer won with the ace, and then drew two rounds of trumps. The ten of hearts was led and, when East covered, he was permitted to hold the trick. He continued with the heart king, which dummy won with the ace, after which declarer ruffed dummy's last heart. The ace and a low diamond put East back on lead and left him with the unhappy choice of leading another red card. Since both declarer's and dummy's hands were stripped of hearts and diamonds, this lead permitted the discard of a club in one hand and a ruff in the other.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Partner opened the bidding with one spade. Opponents passed. I raised to two spades. What should have been partner's rebid?

♠ A Q 8 5 ♥ Q 7 ♦ K 9 8 ♣ A 10 7

Answer: He should pass.

BELOVED ENEMY

By John Balderston, Rose Franken, William B. Meloney

FINAL INSTALLMENT.

Lord Athleigh grimaced. The prospect did not strike him pleasantly. He had elicited a promise from Helen that she would never see Riordan again, and he reminded her now of that promise. He would hold her to it.

England's ofer to negotiate with the Irish rebels created an uproar in Dublin. The Irish Council was split wide open, the diehards bitterly opposed to the conference. Burke banged the table excitedly.

"I'm against it!" he announced flatly.

Dennis remained calm. "All they ask for is a conference to negotiate. They offer full truce and safe conduct to London for our delegates."

"Negotiate, me eye and elbow!" sputtered Callahan scornfully. "I'll give them our terms in a one-word telegram? Freedom!"

Controlling his temper with difficulty, Dennis turned to him. 'The sight of us in London, as willing and anxious to speak for our Cause as to fight for it, might be more impressive than your one-word telegram, Callahan!"

"War!" answered Dennis grimly.

Callahan's laugh was unpleasant. "What have we got now? A county fair?"

"I'm shopkeeper enough to believe that that's their asking price," interjected Ryan. 'What will they settle for? It would be best, to my way of thinking, to sit down with them."

Burke rose and faced the group, his face livid." What do you know about 'diplomacy'—any of you? When they get you in their hands, they'll twist you crossways!"

An excited babble of voices, dissenting and agreeing, threw the meeting into confusion. Dennis raised his hand for quiet.

"Before you vote, men, think! What have we to lose by talking to them? This is the first time they have recognized that we exist. And they've only done that 'unofficially.'" His voice rang with authority, and the men moved by its power, listened intently. "But it's a step! And I'm for every step that brings us nearer to peace—and farms—and homes—and freedom! I ask you to take that step!"

Cries of "Aye, aye" filled the room. Burke and Callahan were overruled.

The Irish delegates to the London conference were Riordan, Ryan, Rooney, Connor, Casey and Burke. On the day of their departure Burke proposed an oath of allegiance. "I pledge my life . . ." he began, and they repeated after him.

"I pledge my life . . ."

'To preserve, support and defend . . ."

"To preserve support and defend . . ."

The reception hall of Lord Athleigh's great house in London was a blaze of light. Life-sized family portraits on the walls looked down upon a brilliant assemblage, statesmen and diplomats magnificent in their orders and decorations, the women's bare arms and throats sparkling with jewels. At the top of the marble stairs Lord Athleigh received his guests. Beside him stood Lady Helen, her great-grandmother's diamond tiara gleaming in her dark hair. So lovely and fragile a vision was she that she might have stepped down from one of the eighteenth-century portraits. A bewigged major domo was announcing the guests as they entered.

A murmur of subdued conversation from people standing about in small groups was interrupted when six men in dinner jackets entered the door. Instantly all eyes were focused upon them in intense and curious inspection.

Lord Athleigh muttered a low oath. "What infernal cheek! Delegates of a republic, indeed!"

His greeting, however, was cordial and gracious. It was a difficult moment for Helen and Dennis when they came face to face. They uttered polite formalities and their faces were masks revealing nothing of their feelings. The Irish, with the exception of Dennis, were ill at ease, and the guests were shrinking back from them. Seeing this, Lord Athleigh realized it would not help their first session tomorrow. Gerald Preston busied himself with introductions.

During a lull Dennis found himself more or less alone with Helen.

"Hello," she said softly.

"Hello," he anskered. "You've so beautiful . . . darling, if I could touch your hand now!"

It was torture to Dennis, seeing her like this. They began to walk slowly, looking straight ahead and will apart from one another, along the marble balcony surrounding the hall. For a moment, as they stood in front of a portrait, Helen moved close to him. All her love was in her eyes and her hand reached out for his. He took it in his own and gripped it hard.

In the council room, presided over by Thornton, the English and Irish delegates sat on two sides of a long table. For three days they had conferred. The English had made concessions far beyond their original intention, had, in the matter of tariffs and boundaries, conceded point after point. Conservatives had become Liberal, and Liberals Radical. But the Irish refused any sort of compromise. They had reached an impasse.

"You have continually avoided consideration of what we actually came for," said Dennis, the Irish spokesman. "You knew what was in our minds when we came. We hoped it was in yours." Then turning to the delegates, he concluded impatiently, "Come on boys, let's go home."

Burke and Rooney were on their feet in a flash. Lord Athleigh rose.

"Gentlemen! We are tired and our vision is blurred. The fate of millions of people lies in our hands. I urge the leniency of our friends," indicating the Irish, "and beg the continuance of this conference tomorrow."

There was a general murmur of assent from both sides of the council.

That evening Lord Athleigh lay in bed reluctantly drinking a sedative which Helen had given him. Her heart ached to see how much the strain of the past few days had aged him.

"It's no use, Helen," he told her dejectedly. "I've failed miserably."

"Is there any hope for peace?" she asked.

"No. And this truce has made matters worse—much worse. Its given Thornton time to prepare. All the machinery of war is moving tonight—tanks—destroyers—men—thousands of men. Horrible! Worse than I would have recommended if there had been no truce. All because a few words stick in the throat of the man who could prevent it. War—horrible, crushing war!"

His eyes closed wearily. He slept. Helen rose, a resolve forming in her mind. She walked noiselessly from the room.

In the hotel where the Irish delegates made their headquarters Ryan and Rooney were arguing, as they had been more or less steadily for days. Dennis listened to them and suddenly he could listen no more. He picked up his hat and started for the door. He must have air, and time to think things out alone. For four days he had been cooped up with people. Burke's hand was on his shoulder.

"Dennis," he said, "perhaps I don't know what's in your mind; but I know this: you've taken an oath and if you break that oath you'll be a dead man the moment you set foot in Ireland."

Dennis met Burke's eyes without flinching. "I took an oath to preserve my country. Good-night, Liam."

Dennis stood on the Embankment looking out over the darkened Thames. Except for the faint river noises, there was no sound. The dense fog wrapped him in a mantle of solitude. Behind him there was a step and someone spoke his name. He turned; it was Helen. When they had greeted each other he said:

"It's my vote that will decide for us, and I'm racking my brain and my heart for an answer. I can't forget the lads who have died—and all they fought for!"

"Is it wrong to remember those who want to live?" she asked gently.

"It is that," he replied. "If we fail the dead in order to bring easy comfort to the living. My country's cause comes first—before any man's right to live. The cost of it matters not at all. Freedom has always been bought with lives."

Helen cried out, "There are Irish women, too, Dennis! They didn't send their men out to die for a few words in a treaty. That's not what your women were praying for when they watched them go away with guns in their hands. They prayed for the right to live with no more bloodshed and heartache!"

Dennis turned from her angrily. "You're talking in a teacup, woman! Don't say any more."

"But I will, Dennis," she insisted. "We're sick of fighting and we want you home again! Or must it be more fighting because you've lost your minds—more killing and more terror?" Then softly, "Dennis, is that everything you and I have to look forward to?"

He said nothing, and realizing the hopelessness of her argument, she turned to leave him, but he caught har roughly in his arms and they stood clasped for a long moment.

"Beloved!" whispered Dennis, his voice shaken. "Oh, if there were only you and I to think of!"

Slowly Helen disengaged herself from his embrace. "All this goes so far beyond us. We're nothing. Whether we see each other or don't; whether we live or die. That's not important now. It's the right of a whole people to live and be happy. Dennis—give them that!"

She turned and in a moment was lost in the fog. Dennis looked after her in a torment of confusion.

All that day, since early morning, Helen had been waiting in the anteroom adjoining the council chamber where, at the final conference, Ireland's fate was being decided. No, not Ireland's, but hers and Dennis'. Up and down, up and down she walked, her heels clicking on the marble floor, her face tense and drawn, not daring to think or hope but praying silently. If Dennis signed the treaty, if England and Ireland made peace, there would be no more white nights of wondering where he was—no more torture—they would be two young people free to love at last.

Suddenly the door of the council room was flung open. The Irish delegation walked down the hall rapidly, Dennis trailing behind. When he saw Helen he stopped. He was haggard and there was a look of defeat rather than of victory about him as he answered her unspoken question.

"Yes," he told her, "I signed it. It must have been right—or God couldn't have let it happen—I wanted peace for Ireland. . . ."

Helen laughed excitedly. "I'm so glad—Oh, Dennis! There's nothing to keep us apart any more, is there?" Still unsmiling, he shook his head. "My poor solemn one—it's over now! Over!"

He broke in quickly: "I must go. I have to take the treaty back to Dublin tonight."

"Let me go with you!" she begged.

"No—no!" She looked so forlorn that he took her hand and said softly, "Helen, darling—I have so much to say to you—and no time to say it—"

He kissed her then, hungrily buft without joy. And slowly, as if he were taking an oath, he said, "I shall love you—with all my heart—forever. Can you remember those words?"

She repeated after him, "I shall love you, with all my heart, forever." She was bewildered and alarmed. "Dennis—what do you mean?"

"No," he said, making an effort to smile, "we're not going to say good-bye—ever—"

Once more, before she could speak, he took her in his arms and kissed her. Then he was gone. Helen stood looking after him, torn by doubts and confusion and longing. Her father same up behind her.

"I've come to respect that man," muttered Lord Athleigh. "The bravest man I've ever known. Heaven help him!"

"Father!" she cried in anguish. "What's wrong?"

"When he signed the treaty he admitted he was signing his own death warrant."

It was a happy day for Ireland—a day for jubilation and daughter and singing. Lorries rumbled through the streets of Dublin, piled high with soldiers waving good-by to the cheering throng. Cathleen O'Brien stood at the window, her arm about little Jerry. There was a knock at the door and she went to open it. Helen stood on the threshhold, tense and breathless.

"Mrs. O'Brien," she began urgently, "where can I find Dennis Riordan?"

"Come in," Cathleen invited hospitably. "He's speaking at a street meeting tonight." She perceived Helen's suffering and her warm heart went out to the girl. "Oh, Lady Helen, I wish I could help you—he's brought us peace, but the diehards are at his throat. Liam Burke is a hard man!"

"Burke!" cried Helen. "Where can I find him? Take me to him!"

Though Cathleen protested that it was useless, she and Helen hurried together to Ronan's hotel. There, locked in secret conference, Burke, Callahan, O'Rourke and one or two others had reached a decision: Dennis Riordan was a traitor. He had sold them out, and he must pay for his treason tonight. Helen interrupted their conclave. That they meant to kill him was plainly written on their faces. But her impassioned pleading fell on unresponsive ears. They took no pains to conceal their contempt and hatred, believing her responsible for Dennis' treason. As the clock struck eight O'Rourke took up his gun and hurried out. Her heart pounding madly, Helen followed.

In public square Dennis stood on a platform brilliantly lit by flares and addressed the people massed about him. His voice rang with passionate sincerity, and they listened, their faces uplifted, moved and silent.

"For 800 years," he told them, "Irish patriots have fought for freedom. They died to keep alive the ideal that Ireland might some day achieve a government of its own. And now, for the first time in Irish history, we have that government!"

A burst of wild cheering interrupted him. When it subsided he continued:

"But all they fought for will be lost unless you, who will enjoy the peace for which they struggled, make that peace a permanent and lasting one."

On the outskirts of the crowd Helen and Cathleen were struggling to get closer to Dennis, but their path was blocked by a solid wall of humanity.

"There are among us," Dennis continued, "some men who still believe that Ireland is not yet ready for peace. These men have been my friends and it is my hope that I may live long enough to prove to them that what has been gained today is everything we could hope for at this time and that what will be gained in the future depends no longer on gunpowder and hatred but upon the peaceful understanding and unity of our people. You must build a free and healthy Ireland! But it must be built wisely and sanely—and, above all, it must be built in peace!"

As he uttered the last word, the crowd broke into an uproar of cheering. Several young men advanced upon the platform and raised Dennis to their shoulders, carrying him triumphantly to his waitng car. On the running board he raised him arm for silence. "Erin Go Bragh!" he shouted.

In the parlor of a house close by to which he had been carried, Dennis lay on a couch, the tunic of his uniform still wet with blood. The doctor opened the door and beckoned to Helen. She cam in swiftly and knelt on the floor beside Dennis.

He looked at her and made a painful effort to smile. "It's such a little time to see you," he said haltingly. "It's always such a little time. It's been a funny kind of love! We knew in the beginning we never had a chance."

Helen fought desperately to keep back the hot tears that welled up in her eyes. She murmured:

"We're going to have our chance now! Oh, Dennis, we're going to live with each other the way young people live. Oh, my darling, when you're well—"

He smiled again, sadly. "Your hair is such a fine color—I never had the time to tell you." He stirred a little, as if in pain.

She bent over him. "Darling, does it hurt?"

"Funny," he whispered. "We've said good-by to each other every time we've met. We'll never say good-by again, because we'll always pop up again some place, won't we, darling?"

She was crying now, softly, the tears streaming unheeded down her white face. "Yes, darling, we'll always pop up again—some place!"

Outside in the street the people of Dublin stood in the drizzling rain, their heads bowed reverently. Somewhere a boy began to sing a plaintive Irish air.

THE END.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

China is a mighty nation, containing close to 400,000,000 people. Japan has about 70,000,000 people. If a war were fought to a finish between these two nations, the Japanese might or might not win the victory. If they did win, they probably would find it hard to obtain good for themselves from the conquest. In the long run, Japan might become a "province" of China, the same as happened to Manchuria after Manchu kings obtained the Chinese throne.

Today I wish to give a few odd little notes about the Chinese which I did not have room for in the series we have just finished.

A strange incident has been related by a traveler who visited a courtroom in a small Chinese town. A man came into the courtroom, and showed the judge some living butterflies he had caught in a net. Then the judge opened a window, and told the man to let the butterflies go free. The visitor learned that the man had broken the law in some small way, and in punishment had been told he must capture a certain number of butterflies and bring them to court alive. "I often give an order like that," said the judge, "but only for the first offense."

An old method of punishing people in China is to place wooden "yokes" around their necks, and make them stand where people passing by can see them. Their feeling of shame is supposed to be enough punishment. This may remind us of "the stocks" which were used in old England and in English colonies to punish those who broke the law.

There is a story that a foreign visitor to China once spoke to a man wearing a yoke, asking, "Why do you have to do that?"

"Just because I was walking along a country road one day and picked up an old rope," the man replied.

"Do they really punish you for such a thing!" exclaimed the visitor. "Was that the only thing you did?"

"Yes, that was all," said the Chinaman, "but there was a cow at the end of the rope."

When the Manchu emperors were ruling China, officers of the law used to make use of the long pigtails worn by men. If several prisoners, were to be moved from one place to another, the officer in charge of them tied all their pigtails together. Then he let the prisoners walked along in peace, feeling sure they would not try to run away.

By FREDERICK GARDNER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—With the General Motors strike situation taking a turn for the better, selected stocks swung upward in today's market.

Automobiles, steel, rubbers and assorted specialties responded to announcement of a truce with the unions by advancing fractions to around 3 points, some to new recovery peaks.

The rails were given a brief but fast push. Most, though, finished under their top marks.

The day's turnover amounted to 2,897,230 shares compared with 3,260,410 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 issues moved up .2 of a point to 72.1 after remaining unchanged for the preceding two sessions.

Coppers failed to respond to the general boost of the domestic metal to 13 cents a pound, a new high since 1930. It was noted the export price was still under its record post-depression mark and abandonment of foreign output restrictions tended to cool buying ardor for shares in this category.

Oils were diffident as seasonal easing of gasoline charges appeared, along with continuance of large stocks, higher production and refusal of large producers to meet the recent hoist in crude.

Prominent shares on the upward jaunt included General Motors at 68 1-2, Chrysler 122 3-4, United States Steel 81 7-8, Bethlehem 76 3-4, General Electric 59 1-2, U. S. Rubber 50 1-8, Goodyear 30 3-8, Lee Rubber 23 3-8, Santa Fe 75, Baltimore & Ohio 23, Northern Pacific 29 3-4, U. S. Industrial Alcohol 39, Spiegel Inc. 24 7-8, Paramount 26 3-8, Douglas Aircraft 75, Mohawk Carpet 38 3-8, Anchor Cap 24, Armour 8 3-4, Baldwin 10 1-8 and Remington Rand 25 3-4.

American Telephone dropped 3-4 at 182 1-2 notwithstanding the company's 1936 statement showing the $9 dividend fully earned for the first time in four years.

Other losers were American Can 115 3-8, Anaconda 55 1-2, Kennecott 61, Cerro de Pasco 69 1-4, Radio 12, J. I. Case 156 1-2, International Harvester 105 3-4, Texas Corporation 53 7-8, Crown Cork 89 3-4 and Amerada 105.

Brokers' Views

STOCK OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—The market outlook on renewed strength and activity in the last hour with closing prices near day's peak. Bullish sentiment still dominates.

FENNER & BEANE—A high degree of selectivity in group price action is likely to continue with electrical, rail and office equipment as well as machinery and oil stocks.

BEER & CO.—We have not changed our opinion that the market is in need of further correction.

THOMSON & McKINNON — Friday's strength encouraged holders of stocks to believe that the 1936-37 tops soon may be bettered by the industrial average, despite the existence of currently formidable resistance to advance.

E. A. PIERCE & CO.—Preliminary agreement in motor strike encouraging but we would anticipate irregularity until a final agreement becomes definite. Slow progress of the market combined with high activity appears to warrant a more cautious attitude.

COTTON OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—We would expect little movement either way but would be inclined to purchase the nears, should a break occur.

FENNER & BEANE—We favor operations on the constructive side.

BEER & CO.—We favor purchases on substantial declines.

THOMSON & McKINNON—We would take advantage of any moderate reaction to accumulate contracts.

E. A. PIERCE & CO.—We prefer long side of the market as we believe next move will be upward.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO. TO DOBBS & CO.—Apparently the market will continue to mark time until details of the loan release plan are announced.

GRAIN OPINIONS.

COURTS & CO.—See-sawing action of both Liverpool and Winnipeg will probably result in a trading wheat market for the immediate present.

FENNER & BEANE—The market appears to be a little stale from a bull standpoint but with existing conditions we don't believe any material setback will be warranted.

BEER & CO.—We look for lower levels in wheat.

THOMSON & McKINNON—We believe that wheat can be purchased around these levels for moderate trading profits.

E. A. PIERCE & CO.—Considering apparent apathy with which Europe is bidding for Argentine wheat, it will be interesting to observe whether Chicago can hold with breaking the bottom of the current trading area.

COTTONSEED OIL.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO. TO DOBBS & CO.—There was heavy eastern house liquidation of May and July cottonseed oil in the New York cottonseed oil market Friday. This was believed due to the increase in lard. Lard stocks for the first two weeks of January amounted to 5,139,137 pounds, which was larger than the trade anticipated. There was good trade buying on the decline. Crude oil 10¼ cents bid in the southeast. Sales totaled 395 contracts.

FENNER & BEANE—There was some eastern house liquidation in lard and the idea that lard stocks for the first two weeks of January would be over three million pounds. There was good trade buying on the decline with resting orders each point down. Sales totaled 295 contracts.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Prices stiffened all along the line in the bond market today, although outstanding gains were scarce.

A better demand for high-grade corporate issues sent a number higher and marked the reversal of a downward trend in progress all week. Improved sentiment for low-yields and government obligations was regarded in some quarters as indicating a belief reserve requirements of member banks will not be materially altered. Much of the unsettlement in these loans has been attributed to uncertainty over the reserve board's ultimate decision in the matter.

United States government liens advanced in unison, with gains ranging from 2-32 to 3-8 of a point. Treasury 3 1-4s of 1964 ran up the latter fraction to close at 106.5.

Domestic corporate bonds were fairly even, although most active issues appeared a little higher on the day. Rails and utilities made some progress on the upside, while a few industrials wavered a bit. Erie 5s gained 1 at 88 1-4. St. Paul 5s of 1975 added 1-2 at 34 3-4 and Missouri Pacific 5s "F" edged up 3-8 at 46 7-8. Alleghany 5s, Northwestern 4 3-4s and Soo Line 6s worked a bit lower.

American & Foreign Power 5s moved ahead a point to 85 1-2 and International Telephone 5s improved fractionally. Abitibi 5s were reactionary, losing 1 7-8 to 96 1-2.

Of the industrials, Woolworth 4s lost a major fraction and loans of such sugar companies as Vertientes, Camaguay and East Cuba sold off 1 to 2 points. Goodyear 5s and Bethlehem Steel 4 1-4s also declined. The Associated Press averages for 10 industrials dipped .1 of a point to 103.9.

Other Associated Press averages, except for the 10 low-yields, which improved a bit, finished even.

Foreign bonds were unimpressive with prices holding near previous closing levels. South Americans lacked direction and ended the day fractionally uneven.

Turnover totaled $15,923,000, face value, for all bonds compared with $15,785,000 Thursday.

CONSTRUCTION GAINS IN 37 STATES IN 1936

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Construction in 37 eastern states during 1936 increased 45 per cent over 1935, F. W. Dodge Corporation reported today.

Construction in this area last year totaled $2,675,296,000 compared with $1,844,544,900 in 1935. Increased building was especially pronounced in the residential division which accounted for $801,623,800, a gain of 67 per cent over the year before.

Commercial building aggregated $294,136,100 in 1936 against $164,479,800 the preceding year and factory construction of $198,019,100 compared with $108,858,500. Public, educational and institutional building amounted to $506,104,500 against $402,150,300 in 1935.

The total for public works and utilities last year was $920,412,500 against $690,213,200. PWA and WPA projects were an important part of the total.

Because of shrinkage in public works projects of all kinds in December, the report said, total construction was $199,695,700 against $208,204,000 in November and $264,136,500 in December, 1935.

Residential building started in December totaled $65,487,300 against $45,140,000 a year ago.

Cottonseed Oil

NEW YORK.

Final prices were 9 to 12 points net lower with sales of 295 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal: January closed 11.61, March 11.44, May 11.54, July 11.61.

AVERAGE PRICE.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The average price of middling cotton at 10 southern spot markets today was 12.80 cents a pound.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 15.—(AP)—The price of cotton held around the 12.30 cent level in the market today in quiet dealings.

The session was a counter part of the previous dull dealings of the week and options on the futures exchange did not vary 50 cents a bale during the trading period and finally ended from 1 to 5 points lower.

Near months were comparatively strong during the day, largely the result of switching from near to distant months by spot houses who wished to transfer their options to later positions.

March closed at 12.39 May at 12.30 July 12.20 and October at 11.82 bid. Middling spot cotton was up 3 points at New Orleans at 12.99.

The days news offered little to affect the price trend for futures. Foreign markets were better, but Liverpool reported that apathy that has gripped American markets also ruled there. While an Indian advice said the crop in the Broach area had been damaged by frost, it induced no important buying either in foreign markets or at home.

Administration plans for the new crop year received increasing attention from the trade today. With the details of the soil conservation program still in the embryonic stage, many crop commentators were beginning to be apprehensive over how much seed the farmers planned to put in the ground next year. A relatively good price for this year's yield was felt to have sold many planters on the idea of putting even the "fence corners" to cotton next year in an effort to cash in on the good price.

Goods markets continued to be the big bullish news of the day. Worth street reported that 6,000,000 yards of print cloths were sold, while other constructions of gray goods received good attention from buyers.

Port receipts 12,796; week 62,262; season 5,375,239; last season 5,811,056. Exports 12,605; week 144,959; season 3,340,828; last season 3,861,298. Port stocks 2,644,488. Stocks on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston were 149,685; last year 115,482. Spot sales at southern markets were 8,398; last year 13,506.

COTTON RALLIES TARDILY ON N. Y. EXCHANGE

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Reactions in cotton today from opening advances were partly recovered in late trading. March sold off from 12.45 to 12.38 and closed at 12.44. Final prices generally were 3 points net higher to 5 lower.

The market opened 3 to 10 points higher in response to steadier Liverpool cables and short covering in January. The spot position, however, eased from 12.48 to 12.28 when trading in it ended at noon.

Tired long liquidation and some foreign selling developed in later months to carry them off to net losses of 3 to 8 points. Co-operative buying in March caused it to recover to the early high at the close but later deliveries lagged.

Exports today, 12,605, making a total of 3,310,472 for the season thus far. Port receipts, 11,774. United States port stocks, 2,644,186.

Market Outlook

By MAX BUCKINGHAM.

(Copyright, 1937, by United Press.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—(UP)—The stock market appears to be heading for the test which many market observers believe will result in a recession after a steady advance since the start of the year.

United States Steel Corporation common today rose to a new high since 1931 at 81 7-8 on more than a point gain and other leading steel issues made similar advances. This leadership is the type considered favorable to a bull market. But it is recalled that brokers predicted that steel shares would be given a test before the market was forced to try the peaks established late in 1936.

Therefore the action today—trading again approaching the 3,000,000-share level and closing advances ranging to almost two points—is anything but a buying signal. Instead it served only to bring out more caution on future commitments.

Naturally the chief news in the market was the truce declared in the General Motors strike. While many obstacles remain and a definite end of the strike is far from being attained, the truce was at least a favorable point.

One encouraging development during the day was in the railroad field. Car loadings for the week ended January 9 totaled 698,529 units, a gain of 110,576 over the preceding week and 83,676 in the 1936 week. The customary seasonal week-to-week gain is about 14.3 per cent whereas this week's advance over the preceding week amounted to 18.8 per cent. In addition the association of American railroads reported for 95 class I carriers December revenues of $293,876,436, a gain of around 22 per cent over the figures for December, 1935. It was the heaviest year-end business for these carriers—representing 80.9 per cent of the total rail revenues—since 1930 and only slightly under that figure.

Retail trade, the review by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., showed, was curtailed some by the unseasonal warm weather but still showed gains of 10 to 16 per cent over the 1936 figures. On the other hand wholesale markets are enjoying a tremendous burst of business as retailers rush to build up spring stocks. The review found that gain for the week amounted to 20 to 30 per cent over the 1935 period.

Another favorable report was that of the American Telephone & Telegraph System, showing 1936 earnings equivalent to $9.36 a share, the first time since 1931 that the full dividend of the company's stock had been earned and the last quarter of 1936 was the best since the final quarter of 1929, indicating the steady expansion in earnings.

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Lower prices for wheat became the rule late today, with selling pressure directed especially against the May delivery.

A reversal of trend in the Liverpool wheat market, where the close was one cent to 1 1-2 net lower after showing in some cases 3-8 advance, did much to turn Chicago values downward. An additional handicap to friends of higher prices was a trade summary indicating domestic mills and bakers appear in general to have adequate stocks of wheat to last until the United States crop begins to move.

At the close, wheat here was 1-4 to 1 1-4 cents under yesterday's finish, May 132 3-4 to 132 7-8, July 115 1-4 to 115 3-8, September 111 1-8 to 111 1-4, corn 1-2 to 1 1-8 down, May new 111 1-8 to 111 1-4, July new 106 5-8 to 106 3-4, September 102 3-8 to 102 1-2, oats 1-4 to 3-4 off, May 53 7-8 to 54, and rye showing 1 1-2 to 2 cents setback, May 110 5-8. Provisions results were unchanged to 37 cents lower.

The maximum fall of Chicago wheat prices today, 1 1-4 cents a bushel, was suffered by May, an old crop month, which dropped to $1.32 3-4 at the last.

REFORMATORY TERM GIVEN FOR AUTO THEFT

Judge Says 'Shock' May Help Youth More Than 'Chance' Requested.

Hoping that a "shock" might awaken Edwin W. Gockley, Pennsylvanian arrested here on automobile theft charges and violation of postal laws, Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood yesterday sentenced the youth to serve two years in the federal reformatory at Chillcothe, Ohio.

In response to the youth's plea for a "chance," Judge Underwood remarked that he had failed to take advantage of manifold opportunities in the past, and said he was of the opinion that light treatment today would not bring reformation.

"The future is up to you," Judge Underwood said, pointing out that good behavior in the reformatory would bring the youth the "chance" he sought. Gockley was arrested here December 28, two months after he had married an attractive Charleston, S. C., girl. She was not present when Gockley was sentenced.

Two automobile theft charges had been booked against him, together with one charging theft of an Atlanta mail box. Three two-year terms were mated, the sentences to run concurrently.

Others sentenced yesterday by Judge Underwood were:

E. P. Treadaway and James Sweat, year and a day each for theft of a suitcase in interstate passage from the Terminal station. Both have previous records, court attaches said. Both were lectured by Judge Underwood for failing to take advantage of opportunities for reform.

TARZAN'S QUEST No. 24

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Jane could not repress a laugh. "This is becoming a comedy of errors—rifles without ammunition, and our only serviceable firearm in possession of the enemy." But her laugh merged into the angry, ominous roar of the lion which was their jailer. . . .

. . . Tarzan, too, was a prisoner, with far less chance of escape, for his jailers were sly, savage men. The Jungle Lord tested the tight bonds that secured his wrists and ankles, but he soon realized that it was hopeless to attempt to liberate himself. There was nothing to do but wait. Unlike an ordinary man, he wasted no time speculating on his fate. Instead, he composed himself for sleep. And while he slept a council of warriors sat in judgment on him. It was they who wondered what his fate should be.

Some feared to kill him; others feared to let him live. They dreaded the revenge of the Kavuru, who they believed were Tarzan's people. "But if we kill him," one reasoned, "he cannot tell them we killed him!" That seemed to be the clinching argument!

Breathless Moments

By CHARLES W. DUKE.

Bang! . . . Bang-bang! . . . Bang! "The Lady in Red" is approaching with her bespectacled escort. They are part of a crowd pouring from a motion picture theater on Lincoln avenue, on Chicago's north side. The picture just shown on the silver screen is "Manhattan Melodrama," in which one brother, in the role of prosecuting attorney, sends his own kin to the electric chair.

Standing about the exit are a number of men in civilian attire—to all intents just idlers, or escorts waiting for their "sweeties." As the "Lady in Red" emerges, the "loafers" go into action. For the "Lady in Red's" escort is the man they are after. He is disguised—wearing gold-rimmed spectacles and with hat pulled down well over his eyes.

G-men—United States government agents—that's what the "loafers" are! And the "Lady in Red's" escort is first to detect their presence. He stiffens for a moment, while his right hand fumbles in his right-hand coat pocket. But before he can draw, a shot rings out. Then other shots in rapid succession.

Deserting "The Lady in Red," the bespectacled quarry springs to an alley in the hope of escape. More shots—a fusillade by this time. With a shriek "The Lady in Red" flees the scene, taking refuge in a taxicab, and scurries home. Pandemonium reigns in front of the theater.

Too late now for the fugitive to escape the G-men! In the alley they have him cornered. Uncle Sam's operatives are at either end of the passageway. A desperate criminal, brought to bay after long months of search, is making his last stand. Once before they had him in jail, whence he escaped. But not this time.

Down goes John Dillinger, archmobster and gangster, murderer, robber and all-around bad man, riddled through and through on the night of July 22, 1934, by United States Department of Justice agents. Again is vindicated the old saying that eventually your crime will find you out.

ROBERTS EXPLAINS INSPECTOR NAMING

Commissioner Denies Agreement With Pharmacy Board in Appointment.

Columbus Roberts, commissioner of agriculture, said yesterday no agreement had been reached with the State Board of Pharmacy concerning appointment of a chief drug inspector.

"It may be that the trouble is Chairman W. G. Bridges (of the board) while in Columbus favored appointment of Albert Turner, of Columbus, and while in Atlanta was for appointment of Z. O. Moore, of Atlanta," Roberts said.

The commissioner said he had asked Bridges, before the board met in Atlanta, not to recommend anyone from Fulton or Muscogee counties, "because I had already made appointments from each, and did not want to make all the appointments from just a few counties."

He said Bridges later told him if the board could not make a recommendation from Fulton or Muscogee, it had no recommendation to make.

"I construed this to mean the board had no recommendation to make," said Roberts, "so trying to be nice to the board, I appointed Turner. I did not know until yesterday it had recommended Moore. Turner already had been appointed."

Bridges said yesterday the board recommended the appointment, "according to law, and Roberts appointed somebody else."

According to police reports, the negro was shot when he advanced on the detective with a knife, as the investigator sought to question him in the fatal stabbing of Amelia Smith, 27, negro, also of a Fort street address.

Officer Falls 30 Feet During Burglar Hunt

Motorcycle Patrolman B. E. Brooks fell 30 feet through a skylight, but escaped serious injury, late last night as police sought several negro burglars on the roof of the National Wholesale Grocery Company, 127 Decatur street, a block from police headquarters. The burglars escaped.

The officer did not require hospital treatment. Search for the burglars, who left $250 worth of cigarets on the roof, began when L. S. Morris, of the Atlantic Ice & Coal Company, in the rear of the grocery firm, called police, saying several negroes were attempting to steal a truck.

Motorcycle Patrolmen Brooks and R. G. Tuxworth, and Radio Patrolmen B. R. McCurley and W. D. Densmore hurried to the scene. They discovered the burglars had entered through the second floor, tunneling through a wall to the first floor, where the cigarets were taken.

TOKYO PRESS ALARMED BY U. S. CONSIDERATION OF BIG-GUN WARSHIPS

Pictures Printed of Superdreadnaughts, With Cannon Aimed at Japan.

TOKYO, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Washington dispatches reporting the United States may arm its two new 35,000-ton battleships with 16-inch guns were given sensational prominence in Tokyo newspapers today.

The news was published under large headlines, supported by pictures of American superdreadnaughts with large guns superimposed, pointed menacingly westward across the Pacific.

Naval authorities interpreted the dispatches as indicating aggressive intentions on the part of the United States navy. According to the Domei (Japanese) News Agency they said plans to mount 16-inch guns on the new battleships show America "means to adopt cross-ocean tactics, using capital ships and monster guns."

Officers were quoted as saying Japan must continue to build warships suited to her special needs, to maintain her seapower in the western Pacific.

Report Is Unofficial.

The United States navy has not yet announced what main armament the two new battleships to be laid down this year will carry, although it has been indicated authoritatively they will either mount nine 16-inch guns or 12 14-inch guns.

Japan could have made certain the new American capital ships would not carry guns of more than 14 inches by adhering to an agreement contained in the London naval treaty of 1936. She has refused, however, thus far to do so.

That agreement provided that the United States, Britain and France—the three signatories—would agree to limit gun calibers to 14 inches provided Italy and Japan agreed by April 1, 1937 to abide by such limitation.

Italy Willing.

Italy yesterday (January 15) notified the British government of her acceptance of this limitation. Japan has remained silent.

However, the Japanese government last summer definitely rejected Britain's invitation to adhere to the London treaty as a whole.

The British admiralty has announced that the two battleships laid down New Year's Day, the King George V and the Prince of Wales, would carry 14-inch guns.

ITALY ANNOUNCES ADHERENCE TO LIMIT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Italian assurances improved prospects today for limiting the gun power of the world's major navies.

Italy notified Great Britain she would comply with the 1936 London naval treaty by mounting no guns larger than 14 inches on her capital ships.

The United States, Great Britain and France previously agreed in the London treaty to limit their armament similarly if both Japan and Italy joined in by April 1 this year.

Secretary Hull told reporters today that he had no information on Japan's attitude. Reports that that country had the matter under "active consideration" came from London.

ROBBERIES REPORTED IN DAWSONVILLE AREA

DAWSONVILLE, Ga., Jan. 15.—Robbers entered Harben Brothers' filling station here late last night by prying open a door and carried away many cigars, cigarets and other merchandise and wrecked the pumps, the total damage and loss being estimated at $250. Later, Clay Hulsey, operator of an oil station at Silver City, seven miles south of here, reported his station had been robbed of a musical instrument and other machines.

An automobile containing articles thought to have been included in the loot was reported as having passed through Cumming early today and officers have taken several articles to Atlanta to be searched for fingerprints.

There were said to have been three men in the party.

W. W. WAITS PASSES FOLLOWING STROKE

Southern Railway Superintendent of Terminals Was Masonic Leader.

W. W. Waits, veteran railroad employe and Masonic leader, died early last night at the residence, 204 Mills street, N. W.

Mr. Waits, who was 68, suffered a stroke a short time after he had completed his evening meal. He had been in apparent good health, and death was unexpected.

A native of Atlanta and a life-long resident of this city, Mr. Waits was a veteran employe of the Southern Railway System, with which he had been associated for 50 years.

His service with the railroad began when, at the age of 18 years, he was employed as a switchman. He rose successively from switchman to yard conductor, to yard master, and in 1912 was made superintendent of terminals, a post he held at the time of his death.

Active in Masonic circles, many years ago he served as worshipful master of Capital City Lodge, F. & A. M., of which he was a long-time member. He also held membership in the Scottish Rite and Yaarab temple.

He was a member of Payne Memorial Methodist church, serving as a member of the board of stewards. In 1933, he represented the old sixth ward in council as an alderman.

Surviving are his wife; a daughter, Mrs. G. W. Cranford Sr.; a son, C. E. Waits; three sisters, Mrs. George L. Houck, Mrs. Edwin Bradley, of Chattahoochee, and Mrs. Frank Willoughby, of Cincinnati; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

THREE INDICTED FOR BURGLARIES

Fulton Grand Jury Also Returns Murder Bill Against Byrd.

Indictments for burglary, possession of burglary tools and breaking into an automobile were returned by the Fulton grand jury yesterday against Charles McDonald and Spencer Bedford, two of the three youths arrested recently by city detectives in connection with a series of burglaries.

James Pope, third member of the alleged burglary gang, was indicted on charges of possessing burglary tools and breaking into a truck belonging to Mrs. Tillie Hirsch and taking cigarets and other articles valued at $152.16. This was the same crime his companions were indicted for.

McDonald and Bedford were charged with burglarizing the Georgia Beverage Company on December 13, and taking property valued at $422.20. All three arrests were made by Detectives H. L. Sexton and S. W. Roper.

A true bill charging murder was returned against Jerry Byrd for the alleged fatal stabbing of J. C. Ellison, January 10. James A. Corish was indicted on counts of involuntary manslaughter and failing to stop after an accident. He is accused of running over Wayne Cox, fatally injuring him, on the night of November 15 as Mr. Cox was stepping from a street car at West Peachtree street and North avenue.

POPE SUFFERING FROM LEG PAINS

Holy Father Delays Convening Pontifical Academy of Science.

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 15.—(AP)—Still suffering considerable pain in his legs, Pope Pius today delayed convening of the new pontifical academy of sciences scheduled for next month.

The Holy Father, Vatican prelates said, hoped he might be sufficiently improved to permit his attendance later. Originally the academy was to have convened February 6. A new date was not set.

There was hope, too, the Pope might be able to celebrate mass in the chapel adjacent to his bedroom next Sunday—reciting the service from a reclining position before a special table. Ecclesiastical law permits an invalid cleric to conduct a service in this manner.

The pontiff broke off a tooth while eating today and underwent a local anaesthetic while his dentist, Dr. Guilio Zunini, completed the extraction.

He spent some time on a wheeled divan and received Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, and Commendatore Bernardino Navara, director of the Vatican galleries.
